

A Personal Recollection of Bob Harney

W. H. Nelson

Today, as some of you will know, is the American Thanksgiving Day, a serious civic, if no longer a religious, holiday in the United States. It is a day of feasting and celebration, and Bob Harney enjoyed those aspects of it, and seemed to enjoy as well the day's opportunities for hospitality. I must say I would rather be at Bob Harney's house eating Thanksgiving dinner than here. And I am sure Bob would rather be at home on this day with his family and friends than here in remembered spirit.

Many of you, no doubt, know Bob Harney's personal history; some of you may not. He was brought up in Salem, Massachusetts, his neighbours Irish, French-Canadian, Italian, and some old-stock Yankees. His own family background was Irish and Jewish, with a bit of French-Canadian and only the slightest trace of Italian. His mother recalls that he had no apparent special interest in Italians as a boy (except for being beaten up from time to time by Italian kids), and became interested in Italian history at Harvard almost accidentally. It seems he was doing a paper on Yugoslav foreign relations and needed to use the diaries of Mussolini's Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, which were available only in Italian. He discovered he could, with only a little effort, read Italian, having some facility with languages and having won a Latin prize in preparatory school. In any event, he took to Italian history, and went from Harvard to Berkeley to do a Ph. D. in Italian history under Richard Webster's direction.
