Representation Maria C. Escobar-Lemmon, Michelle M. Taylor-Robinson, 2014-05-14 While there is a vast literature on women s political interests there is hardly any consensus about what constitutes women s interests or how scholars should approach studying them Representation can occur in various venues or by various actors but due to power imbalances across political groups it is not always realized in any substantive way The essays in this book constitute a broad and geographically comparative move toward defining new and unified theoretical orientations to studying representation among women Representation involves not only getting group members into government but also articulating group interests and translating those interests into policy Because competing groups have different policy preferences and act out of self interest representation of historically marginalized groups is a contentious contingent process that is likely to ebb and flow The book begins with a theoretical positioning of the meaning of women s interests issues and preferences It considers the need to add nuance to how we conceive of and study intersectionality and the dangers of stretching the meaning of substantive representation It then looks at descriptive representation in political parties high courts and legislatures as well as how definitions of interest affect who represents

women in legislatures and social movements The book concludes by suggesting testable propositions and avenues for future research to enhance understanding about representation of women and of other historically under represented groups Chapters include cases from the United States Latin America Western Europe and Africa

Are Politics Local? Scott Morgenstern, 2017-10-12 Are politics local Why Where When How do we measure local versus national politics And what are the effects This book provides answers to these questions within an explicitly comparative framework including both advanced and developing democracies It does so by using a statistically based and graphical account of party nationalization providing methodology and data for legislative elections covering scores of parties across dozens of countries The book divides party nationalization into two dimensions static and dynamic to capture different aspects of localism both with important implications for representation Static nationalization measures the consistency in a party s support across the country and thus shows whether parties are able to encompass local concerns into their platforms Dynamic nationalization in turn measures the consistency among the districts in over time change in electoral results under the presumption that where districts differ in their electoral responses local factors must drive politics Each of the two dimensions in sum considers representation from the perspective of the mix of national versus local politics

Mr. Smith Goes to Ottawa David C. Docherty, 2011-11-01 In Mr Smith Goes to Ottawa the author compares the 34th 1988 93 and the 35th 1993 97 Parliaments The former the second consecutive Conservative led majority government could not appear more different from the Liberal one which followed Over two thirds of its members were rookies More significantly over one third represented two new political parties the Bloc Quebecois and the Reform party Yet for all this change Docherty shows that the new agendas of the 35th Parliament have not translated into changes in the legislative behaviour or socialization of new members Unlike Jimmy Stewart in Washington the majority of the men and women who go to Ottawa end up accepting a limited policy role
