Quality in Science Marcel Chotkowski LaFollette, 1982 The essays in this volume offer a wide variety of fresh perspectives on the assessment of quality in science and technology They proceed from the premise that while quantitative measures may be useful for gross assessments a rounded picture of scientific activity requires qualitative measures that are sensitive to the ethical conceptual social and historical contexts of science Among the questions they explore are How do we develop such qualitative measures Are different measures needed for different groups involved in and affected by scientific work What are the constraints on quality Overall the book provides a solid base on which the debate over public assessments of science and the development of indicators of quality may proceed Contributors include Sissela Bok Lewis Branscomb Harvey Brooks George E Brown Jr Don Fuqua Orrin G Hatch Donald Hornig Roy MacLeod Bruce Mazlish Robert S Morison Kenneth Prewitt Doug Walgren Peter Weingart and Daniel Yankelovich Marcel Chotkowski La Follette is editor of the journal Science Technology Human Values in which most of these essays first appeared

Quality in Online Science Alastair J Gill, Maria Xenitidou, Nigel Gilbert, 2014 A decade ago Neus et al 2001 noted the negative impact of the internet upon matters of information quality With the internet making publishing virtually cost free many processes that used to evaluate the quality of information are now becoming less relevant leaving a question about the alternatives Assessing quality is difficult because it cannot be directly measured it often varies according to the point in time of the evaluation and the task at hand and it is often emotive and politicized It can also depend upon individual opinion with similar measures proving divergent in practice e.g. Martens and Martens 2001 Bartneck and Hu 2009 In this paper we report work that seeks firstly to understand quality in scientific online settings better and secondly make recommendations for the design and implementation of self organizing quality systems such as scientific communities in which scholars share evaluate and access relevant information
