Ethics for Bioengineering Scientists Howard Winet,2021-12-08 This book introduces bioengineers and students who must generate and or report scientific data to the ethical challenges they will face in preserving the integrity of their data It provides the perspective of reaching ethical decisions via pathways that treat data as clients to whom bioengineering scientists owe a responsibility that is an existential component of their professional identity The initial chapters lay a historical biological and philosophical foundation for ethics as a human activity and data as a foundation of science The middle chapters explore ethical challenges in lay engineering medical and bioengineering scientist settings These chapters focus on micro ethics individual behavior and cases that showcase the consequences of violating data integrity Macro ethics policy is dealt with in the Enrichment sections at the end of the chapters with essay problems and subjects for debates in a classroom setting The book can be used for individual study using links in the Enrichment sections to access cases and media presentations like PBS Ethics in America The final chapters explore the impact of bioengineering science ethics on patients via medical product development its regulation by the FDA and the contribution of data integrity violation to product failure The book was developed for advanced undergraduate and graduate students in bioengineering It also contains much needed material that researchers and academics would find valuable e g FDA survey and lab animal research justification Introduces an approach to ethical decision making based on treating data as clients Compares the ethics of three professions engineering medicine and bioengineering Provides five moral theories to choose from for evaluating ethical decisions and includes a procedure for applying them to moral analysis and application of the procedure to example cases Examines core concepts like autonomy confidentiality conflict of interest and justice Explains the process of developing a medical product under FDA regulation Explores the role of lawyers and the judiciary in product development including intellectual property protection Examines a range of ethical cases from the historical Tuskegee autonomy case to the modern CRISPR Cas9 patent case Howard Winet PhD is an Adjunct Professor recall Orthopaedic Surgery and Bioengineering at University of California Los Angeles The Illusion of Objectivity, the Question of Ethics, Or Give the Right Support Manuela Mühlbauer,2007-11 Seminar paper from the year 2004 in the subject Business economics Business Ethics Corporate Ethics grade 2 85% University of Applied Sciences Chur SSTH Swiss School of Tourism and Hospitality Chur course MBA 7 entries in the bibliography language English abstract The topic of this paper might lead the cursory reader to the assumption that this is another countless academic paper about Ethic But Ethic is a topic which is more than a current interest and it belongs to each of us The literature today tends to value independence encouraging people to become liberated and do their own thing The reality is that we are interdependent and the independent model is not optimal for use in an interdependent environment that requires leaders and team players Sometimes it is necessary to take a deeper look into value systems of persons environments and organizations The main question is How can people survive with integrity in the business environment and How can organizations provide the employees with the necessary support for ethical behaviour in companies The problem with relying on the Personality Ethic is that unless the basic underlying paradigms are right simply changing outward behaviour is not effective We see the world based on our perspective which can have a dramatic impact on the way we perceive things The character Ethic assumes that there are some absolute principles that exist in all human beings Some examples of such principles are fairness honesty integrity human dignity potential and growth Sometimes principles contrast with practices in that practices arte for specific situations whereas principles have universal application And especial for these situations it is necessary to have a code of conduct to lead the organization into an ethical direction and to give the right support Gender in the Legal Profession Joan Brockman,2001 The history of the legal profession in Canada and elsewhere is one of the exclusion of women Aboriginals ethnic and racial minorities and those from less privileged classes

Based on face to face interviews with 50 women and 50 men called to the Bar in British Columbia during the past 37 years Joan Brockman has studied this phenomenon and tried to determine reasons why such exclusion has been practised and what its effects have been particularly with respect to women Although legal barriers that historically prevented women from entering the legal profession have been removed informal and structural barriers that impede women's full participation within the profession remain Much of the discrimination still experienced stems from expectations that women in particular will assume primary responsibilities for child care elder care emotional stability in the home household management and other domestic matters In addition some women still experience sexual harassment and discrimination even if they have managed to reduce or avoid additional domestic responsibilities There have to be sure been changes and accommodations made for women in the legal workforce and men as well as women have helped to make them But Brockman concludes until there is significant change in how women are perceived in relation to domestic duties it is unlikely that they will attain equality within the legal profession The profession will only change when perceptions of the family change at which point women will not only fit the mould at work but men also will fit the mould at home
