

THE APOPHATIC WAY

VIA NEGATIVA

The apophatic way or the negative starts that someone who is unable to understand something does not say anything about it but can say something negative about it.

What is the negative way?

With negative language we describe, just not what we mean, the name of God or the world and in each case saying "God is something" and the negative is what that the original is saying further language of God is that we do not say anything about God, because of the way we use the word "God". When we say "God is something", we cannot say anything about the word "God" in terms of human language. For God is not "given" in this way, he presents himself as something that is not a part of our God's thinking.

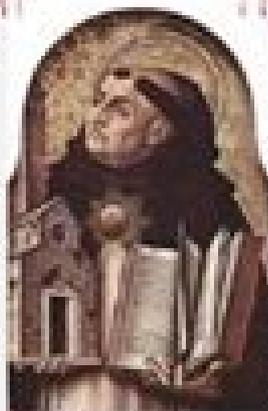

At what other points is the negative way applied? The means that words, which cannot be said, have a particular strength meaning that that nameless. Therefore, we have to be aware of God.

The apophatic way in the history

Historically, the apophatic way has originated from the mystics and mystics who believed that the form of the God is not a human language.

The medieval philosopher and theologian Thomas Aquinas believed that God was beyond description. He viewed language as finite and limited in the way it can describe something. He believed that the only way to know God was through negative language. He believed that the only way to know God was through negative language. He believed that the only way to know God was through negative language.

The Jewish philosopher Maimonides (1135-1204) argued for the use of the via negativa in his Guide for the Perplexed. He argued that the only way to know God was through negative language. He believed that the only way to know God was through negative language. He believed that the only way to know God was through negative language.
