New Dreamland Writing Nz Architect:

New Dreamland Douglas Lloyd-Jenkins,2005-01-01 Douglas Lloyd Jenkins brings together in one volume a selection of key essays 28 in total that have shaped 20th century New Zealand architecture and architectural thinking The essays have traditionally appeared in journals and magazines but with an increasing popular and scholarly interest in NZ architectural history particularly as it pertains to the 20th century there is considerable renewed interest in these difficult to locate works Each decade is well represented particularly the 1940s and 1950s with the influences of the Central European refugees such as Plischke Porsolt Kulka and Cacala and the renowned Group Architects and the 1970s with the innovative philosophies of Peter Beaven Miles Warren Chris Brooke White and David Mitchell both in the areas of residential and commercial architecture

Architecture and Urbanism in the British Empire G. A. Bremner,2016-10-13 Throughout today's postcolonial world buildings monuments parks streets avenues entire cities even remain as witness to Britain's once impressive if troubled imperial past These structures are a conspicuous and near inescapable reminder of that past and therefore the built heritage of Britain's former colonial empire is a fundamental part of how we negotiate our postcolonial identities often lying at the heart of social tension and debate over how that identity is best represented This volume provides an overview of the architectural and urban transformations that took place across the British Empire between the seventeenth and mid twentieth centuries Although much research has been carried out on architecture and urban planning in Britain's empire in recent decades no single comprehensive reference source exists The essays compiled here remedy this deficiency With its extensive chronological and regional coverage by leading scholars in the field this volume will quickly become a seminal text for those who study teach and research the relationship between empire and the built environment in the British context It provides an up to date account of past and current historiographical approaches toward the study of British imperial and colonial architecture and urbanism and will prove equally useful to those who study architecture and urbanism in other European imperial and transnational contexts The volume is divided in two main sections The first section deals with overarching thematic issues including building typologies major genres and periods of activity networks of expertise and the transmission of ideas the intersection between planning and politics as well as the architectural impact of empire on Britain itself The second section builds on the first by discussing these themes in relation to specific geographical regions teasing out the variations and continuities observable in context both practical and theoretical

Changing Times Jenny Carlyon,Diana Morrow,2014-02-01 From the golden weather of postwar economic growth through the globalization economic challenges and protest of the 1960s and 1970s to the free market revolution and new immigrants of the 1980s and 1990s and beyond this account the most complete and comprehensive history of New Zealand since 1945 illustrates the chronological and social history of the country with the engaging stories of real individuals and their experiences Leading historians Jennifer Carlyon and Diana Morrow discuss in great depth New Zealand's move toward nuclear free status its embrace of a small state free market ideology and the seeming rejection of its citizens of a society known for the worship of averages. Stories of pirate radio in Auckland's Hauraki Gulf, the first DC8 jets landing at Mangere airport, feminists liberating pubs, public protests over the closing of post offices and indigenous language nests vividly demonstrate how a postwar society famous around the world for its dull conformity became one of the most ethnically, economically and socially diverse countries on earth. Long Live the Modern Julia Gatley, 2008. Long Live the Modern celebrates New Zealand's heritage of modern architecture. It is not a history of modern architecture in that country. Rather, it identifies 180 key modern buildings that survive and maintain their original design integrity. The Writers Directory, 2004. New Zealand (Ao-tea-roa), 1913. Dictionary Catalog of the Research Libraries of the New York Public Library, 1911-1971 New York Public Library. Research Libraries, 1979. International Books in Print, 1997. Travel Indonesia, 1995. Forthcoming Books Rose Army, 1997. Arts & Humanities Citation Index, 1994. Big House, Small House John Walsh, Patrick Reynolds, 2012-01-01. Sixty outstanding architects designed new New Zealand homes. John Walsh and Patrick Reynolds are back with their third handsome New Zealand residential architecture book which this time covers 60 projects built since 2007 and ranging from the small baches studios and apartments through to the big substantial new residences and conversions. Homes with budgets to match their scale. Walsh and Reynolds have track records as New Zealand's preeminent architectural writer and photographer respectively. This time they are joined by a team of eminently well-qualified contributing writers who under John Walsh's editorial supervision bring together a very significant survey of residential architecture endeavour in recent years. Thoughtfully written, beautifully photographed and handsomely produced, this massive book is unrivalled. Complete with plans and enormously comprehensive, it is both a celebration and a sourcebook of New Zealand's best architectural work. Life's a Beach Douglas Lloyd Jenkins, 2016-10-31. A fascinating account of how the beach has influenced New Zealand lifestyle, culture and identity. Experiencing beach life is simply part of being a New Zealander. It has helped shape our annual summer holiday, the games we play, the clothes we wear and the houses we build. It has also played an important role in the development of Kiwi identity. In this compelling and generously illustrated exploration of beach life over the last 90 years, writer, historian and style commentator Douglas Lloyd Jenkins examines how attitudes towards the beach have evolved and how the beach, a hot bed of hedonistic pleasures as well as a magnet for holidaying families, has in turn brought about important social change. Open to all yet increasingly fringed with expensive property accessible only to the rich, the New Zealand beach has always been a place of extremes. In Beach Life Lloyd Jenkins provides a colourful account of the pioneering trends and pivotal influences that have shaped Kiwi's enduring attraction to the beach and the lasting impact the beach has had on every aspect of New Zealand society. Snapshot 500 Julia Gatley, Sara Lee, 2013. The Lost Bungalow and Other Stories Paul Litterick, 2016. This is a study of architectural writing in New Zealand. Its purpose is to discover interpretations of architecture outside the canon of New Zealand architectural writing that have been overlooked by architectural historians From these writings new interpretations of architectural history have been made These interpretations bring into question the canon and the historical narratives it has created In particular this study challenges the canonical narrative of New Zealand architecture a cyclical history that joins the distant past with the expected future to create the idea a national architecture that reflects New Zealand circumstances and character This omissions and elisions of this narrative are challenged by close reading bibliographical research and literary theory Each chapter of this study is discreet No attempt has been made to create a single narrative that connects the episodes described in these chapters Such narratives can be found in the canonical texts but these non canonical writings undermine them The episodes described in this study take place in the twentieth century Their subjects are building types architectural history and architectural writing

Architecture ,2006 This book presents the reader with another look at the New Zealand landscape through the eyes of New Zealand architects photographers and writers Buildings have been juxtaposed alongside images of nature and are accompanied by ideas about the notion of site in order to see the New Zealand landscape anew Twenty two architect designed houses have been featured from twenty two distinctly different regions of New Zealand They are collected together as examples of how each unique environment has inspired the architect to produce a different solution as to how a house can interact with the landscape as well as accommodate contemporary modes of living

A History of New Zealand Architecture Peter Shaw,2003-01-01 This updated and re jacketed edition reviews the latest developments in New Zealand s rich architectural history and explores the way a country s architecture reflects the spirit and aspirations of its inhabitants

John Blair ,2010-01-01 John Blair has been practicing in Queenstown Arrowtown for near on forty years His span of work covers all the styles and developments in New Zealand over that time and he is still a practicing architect His work at Ilam Campus in Christchurch Queenstown and Central Otago were signposts for the area and he has made an indelible impact on the built environment in those areas As a consequence he is a singularly important New Zealand architect His latter work on wineries is recognised as seminal in the category and important both in terms of the wine industry and winery architecture This book covers much of his work over all those years from the early Queenstown CBD designs Central Otago ski fields and to the current award winning wineries and houses Essays by Ross Brown Gordon Moller and Steve Smith of Craggy Range Wineries give a considered and intimate insight into John his philosophies and his work John s own essay is a particular personal and frank assessment of himself For anyone interested in New Zealand architecture it s development over the last forty years and in John s own work this book is essential
