Brears, 2023-01-13 While urban settlements are the drivers of the global economy and centres of learning culture and innovation and nations rely on competitive dynamic regions for their economic social and environmental objectives urban centres and regions face a myriad of challenges that impact the ways in which people live and work create wealth and interact and connect with places Rapid urbanisation is resulting in urban sprawl rising emissions urban poverty and high unemployment rates housing affordability issues lack of urban investment low urban financial and governance capacities rising inequality and urban crimes environmental degradation increasing vulnerability to natural disasters and so forth At the regional level low employment low wage growth scarce financial resources climate change waste and pollution and rising urban peri urban competition etc are impacting the ability of regions to meet socio economic development goals while protecting biodiversity The response to these challenges has typically been the application of inadequate or piecemeal solutions often as a result of fragmented decision making and competing priorities with numerous economic environmental and social consequences In response there is a growing movement towards viewing cities and regions as complex and sociotechnical in nature with people and communities interacting with one another and with objects such as roads buildings transport links etc within a range of urban and regional settings or contexts This comprehensive MRW will provide readers with expert interdisciplinary knowledge on how urban centres and regions in locations of varying climates lifestyles income levels and stages development are creating synergies and reducing trade offs in the development of resilient resource efficient environmentally friendly liveable socially equitable integrated and technology enabled centres and regions Global Urban Policy David Kaufmann, Mara Sidney, 2026-03-31 Cities are active policy innovators of global importance whether responding to climate change migration poverty or health disparities or aiming to generate growth Since cities adapt to the needs and interests of global capital they may implement policies that slight the well being of everyday residents and the most vulnerable How cities choose to contribute to a democratic and sustainable future reveals dimensions of political life playing out in society at large Global Urban Policy suggests that to understand contemporary societal transformation and political and policy processes more generally we need to study the policies that cities create and implement Going beyond thinking of urban as a physical site the authors show that an urban mode of life is one marked by diversity complexity chaos flexibility and ongoing change With eleven empirical case studies the authors examine issues including housing and urban development migration climate change and crime in cities as varied as Berlin Medell n Chicago Accra Guangzhou S o Paulo Mumbai and Saint Etienne The studies show how contemporary confrontations between public and private property power and justice participation and exclusion wealth and poverty and emerging technology and existing economic social and political structures take physical form in cities Global Urban Policy engages with theoretical developments in public policy urban politics and urban studies to develop and demonstrate a framework for urban policy analysis

Urban Development and New Localism Sudha Mohan, 2005 The concern of the present work is to examine urban development and new localism with special reference to Mumbai It views urban development in the present context as development taking place in the urban realm with special emphasis on people centred development PCD in Mumbai The study traces the evolution of the concept of development from its growth oriented approach to the present approach of PCD In fact development in general and urban development in particular with emphasis on PCD received scant attention in both the policy pronouncements as well as the programmes and plans made after independence An effort is made in this study to develop the argument that urban development of the people centred kind lends itself to sustainable cities where government collaborates with the people through their civil society organisations to bring about change that is not only positive but also sustainable It reiterates the relevance of the PCD paradigm in Mumbai and emphasises the inter connectivity between civil society actors and government at all levels The theoretical frame is reinstated in terms of salience of civil society state in society perspective social capital formation and viability of new localism The conclusion drawn from the two Mumbai based case studies constitutes the core of the empirical component based on qualitative research that is aimed at validating the theoretical formulations and features of PCD and new localism

Facets of Globalization Shahid Yusuf, Simon J. Evenett, Weiping Wu, 2001-01-01 Since 1985 national economies have become increasingly integrated into a global network At the same time both population and production in developing countries are becoming concentrated in urban regions This in turn has generated demands for more local autonomy shifting more decision making to sub national levels Globalization is expected to continue leading to greater openness and international mobility of capital and people There are few reasons to believe that these trends will abate if anything they are likely to intensify the focus on cities and sharpen competition among these for international and local resources This volume underscores the transformative role of globalization and urbanization and shows the interplay between the two forces The Urban Geography Reader NICK FYFE, JUDITH KENNY, 2020-04-15
