

SOLOMANS GAP

The westbound grade on the Jersey Central from White Haven to Solomons Gap was considerably less severe than the eastbound climb from Ashley and freight trains leaving the Lehigh River Gorge did not require helpers. When the Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley railroads consolidated trackage on November 30, 1965, most freight trains used the CNJ route for the 17.4 miles between Fraser, where both roads had used LV tracks, and Laurel Run to take advantage of its easier gradients to cross Penobscot Mountain.

(Left) An eastbound freight climbs through Solomons Gap behind an eclectic combination of units led by GP9m #1531 with N&W F7's #3717 and 3697 along with CNJ RS-3's #1540 and 1553 on March 25, 1972. The GP9m was rebuilt from the remains of GP7 #1526 which was wrecked in a tragic accident when it and #1532 went through the open span of the Newark Bay Drawbridge on September 15, 1958.

(Below) While no station or blacktop platform was located at this point, the location was clearly marked in this August 18, 1968 view with a typical CNJ sign for the benefit of the crews of passing trains reporting their location.

(Opposite page, top) The same motley motive power mismatch has emerged from the tunnel about nine miles east of Solomons Gap and is apparently now below the snow line later on the same early spring day.

(Opposite page, bottom) SD-35's #2501 and 2512 followed by GP7 #1531 pass a rural grade crossing in Crestwood on August 18, 1968 as they grind upgrade with westbound tonnage. As the reader can see, freight-only #1531 (and 1532 also) spent most of their career out on the Pennsylvania Division until that territory was abandoned in 1972.
