This thesis explores the administrative issues that factor into the teaching of writing online I explore these issues by situating the Conference on College Composition and Communication Position Statement of Principles and Example Effective Best Practices for Online Writing Instruction at the center of this project by both examining and critiquing it as a resource Through a case study of the way in which Oregon State develops and delivers online writing courses I fully explore the contents of this Position Statement to its boundaries and illustrate how other institutions can identify their own model of instruction in order to use the Position Statement as a critical lens Also in this exploration I identify and articulate the limitations of the Position Statement based upon its minimal treatment of the issues of instructional design technological literacy and access administrative complexity and the situation of writing programs within institutional settings I address these shortcomings of the current Position Statement in order to advance the field of composition studies by demonstrating the opportunities available to the CCCC Committee for Effective Practices in Online Writing Instruction to revisit these areas and revise the document when the time has come to do so

Handbook of Research on Writing Instruction Practices for Equitable and Effective Teaching Hodges, Tracey S.,2022-05-27 Writing is a critical component for teaching children about advocacy and empowering student voice as well as an essential tool for learning in many disciplines Yet writing instruction in schools often focuses on traditional methods such as the composition of five paragraph essays or the adherence to proper grammatical conventions While these are two components of writing instruction and preparation in education they only provide a small glimpse into the depth and breadth of writing As such writing instruction is increasingly complex and requires multiple perspectives and levels of skill among teachers The Handbook of Research on Writing Instruction Practices for Equitable and Effective Teaching serves as a comprehensive reference of issues related to writing instruction and leading research about perspectives methods and approaches for equitable and effective writing instruction It includes practices beyond K 12 including best writing practices at the college level as well as the development of future teachers Providing unique coverage on culturally relevant writing socio and racio linguistic justice and urgent writing pedagogies this major reference work is an indispensable resource for administrators and educators of both K 12 and higher education pre service teachers teacher educators libraries government officials researchers and academicians
