Evolution and the Machinery of Chance Marshall Abrams, 2023-07-11 An innovative view of the role of fitness concepts in evolutionary theory Natural selection is one of the factors responsible for changes in biological populations Some traits or organisms are fitter than others and natural selection occurs when there are changes in the distribution of traits in populations because of fitness differences Many philosophers of biology insist that a trait's fitness should be defined as an average of the fitnesses of individual members of the population that have the trait Marshall Abrams argues convincingly against this widespread approach As he shows it conflicts with the roles that fitness is supposed to play in evolutionary theory and with the ways that evolutionary biologists use fitness concepts in empirical research The assumption that a causal kind of fitness is fundamentally a property of actual individuals has resulted in unnecessary philosophical puzzles and years of debate Abrams came to see that the fitnesses of traits that are the basis of natural selection cannot be defined in terms of the fitnesses of actual members of populations as philosophers of biology often claim Rather it is an overall population environment system not actual particular organisms living in particular environmental conditions that is the basis of trait fitnesses Abrams argues that by distinguishing different classes of fitness concepts and the roles they play in the practice of evolutionary biology we can see that evolutionary biologists' diverse uses of fitness concepts make sense together and are consistent with the idea that fitness differences cause evolution Abrams's insight has broad significance for it provides a general framework for thinking about the metaphysics of biological evolution and its relations to empirical research As such it is a game changing book for philosophers of biology biologists who want deeper insight into the nature of evolution and anyone interested in the applied philosophy of probability
