Science And Technology In World History An Introduction:

Science and Technology in World History James E. McClellan III, Harold Dorn, 2015-12-15 Arguably the best general history of science and technology ever published Tracing the relationship between science and technology from the dawn of civilization to the early twenty first century James E McClellan III and Harold Dorn s bestselling book argues that technology as applied science emerged relatively recently as industry and governments began funding scientific research that would lead directly to new or improved technologies McClellan and Dorn identify two great scientific traditions the useful sciences which societies patronized from time immemorial and the exploration of questions about nature itself which the ancient Greeks originated The authors examine scientific traditions that took root in China India and Central and South America as well as in a series of Near Eastern empires in late antiquity and the Middle Ages From this comparative perspective McClellan and Dorn survey the rise of the West the Scientific Revolution of the seventeenth century the Industrial Revolution and the modern marriage of science and technology They trace the development of world science and technology today while raising provocative questions about the sustainability of industrial civilization This new edition of Science and Technology in World History offers an enlarged thematic introduction and significantly extends its treatment of industrial civilization and the technological supersystem built on the modern electrical grid The Internet and social media receive increased attention Facts and figures have been thoroughly updated and the work includes a comprehensive Guide to Resources incorporating the major published literature along with a vetted list of websites and Internet resources for students and lay readers

Science and Technology in World History James Edward McClellan, Harold Dorn, 2006 Publisher description Science and Technology in World History James Edward McClellan (III), Harold Dorn, 1999 An introduction to the changing relationship between science and technology Beginning with prehistoric man and continuing their narrative through to NASA and modern medical research the authors demonstrate that the tie between science and technology has not always been apparent The Cambridge World History: Volume 5, Expanding Webs of Exchange and Conflict, 500CE-1500CE Benjamin Z. Kedar, Merry E. Wiesner-Hanks, 2015-04-09 Volume 5 of the Cambridge World History series uncovers the cross cultural exchange and conquest and the accompanying growth of regional and trans regional states religions and economic systems during the period 500 to 1500 CE The volume begins by outlining a series of core issues and processes across the world including human relations with nature gender and family social hierarchies education and warfare Further essays examine maritime and land based networks of long distance trade and migration in agricultural and nomadic societies and the transmission and exchange of cultural forms scientific knowledge technologies and text based religious systems that accompanied these The final section surveys the development of centralized regional states and empires in both the eastern and western hemispheres Together these essays by an international team of leading authors show how processes furthering cultural commercial and political integration within and between various regions of the world made this millennium a proto
