Quantitative Forecasting Of Problems In Industrial Water Systems A. G. D. Emerson, 2002 Quantitative Forecasting of Problems in Industrial Water Systems A. G. D. highly dependent on fossil fuel energy that must be addressed urgently Despite the enormous positive outlooks there are several challenges in the adoption of IOFS models The IOFS is a multiproduct oriented production system that needs multi specialties and marketing Capacity building and infrastructure development are also great challenges in adopting IOFS Moreover the development of IOFS models is highly individualistic and location specific production systems need proper resource optimization and characterization Hence the development of site specific IOFS models to maintain food quality with productivity improvement is a genuine issue to the researchers which needs to be addressed Papers original research review letter to the editors spanning across the discipline related to the IOFS development in sustainable ways are encouraged for inclusion in this research topic Papers should explicitly cover ecosystem restoration farm productivity and profitability and could have a specific focus on the following areas the IOFS models for enhancing productivity and environmental quality through an integrated management approach aiming at the maximization of use efficiencies the management of biomass waste to restore the soil fertility and ecosystem services the effect of integrated management practices on greenhouse gas emissions and energy use Critical approaches for climate smart food production systems
