

WATER POLLUTION SOURCES

What are the two types of water pollution sources?

Point Sources!

Point sources are pipes that discharge pollutants from wastewater treatment plants and from industries.

Point source pollution is easier to manage than nonpoint pollution because the sources are easy to find and control!

Nonpoint Sources!

Nonpoint sources are all other discharges besides those coming from a pipe, coming mainly from rainfall.

Nonpoint sources are "slippery" because they are caused by people's everyday activities.

Here are some examples of NONPOINT SOURCES of pollution...

Sediment is a stream from a construction site

Be the solution to Pointless Personal Pollution!!

Oil and grease runoff from a parking lot going directly to storm drain and eventually to a stream and lake

Agricultural runoff carrying high loads of sediment and fertilizers

Runoff from a forest road without sediment controls

Failing septic tank with polluted runoff going to nearby lake
