Spin doctors train new police chief

New book sure to be controversial, columnist says

You've Been Zoned!
—by Dennis Zook

Big City's incoming police chief Louise Abdul once took top-secret spin doctor training, this columnist has learned.

Abdul spent two weeks at the secretive Institute for Serving the Public's Information Needs, referred to in some circles as SPIN College.

Abdul made headlines in 2010 when she drew her gun on union bully/boss Chuck Bombardieri at Union Square and arrested him for illegal work stoppage.

"SPIN's work helped position me as the police chief for all of Big City," she told me before her sweeping in.

«Controversial lessons and situations come with the job»

"I've got a lot of front-page issues facing me, and I wanted to be ready to communicate my way through some potential controversy."

"Our job is to make people better communicators," says Ian Taylor, SPIN founder and former spin-expert who has trained thousands in message management.

SPIN, co-founded by George Olds, calls their approach radical. "We turn spin into a science, using tailored systems to help you answer any kind of question."

Taylor and Olds have launched a book that's sure to
