Elliott, 2000 Mark W Elliott presents a range of interpretations of the imagery used in the Song of Songs and demonstrates how the figures of the Bridegroom and Bride were understood He pays attention to the historical context of those commenting on the Song between the councils of Constantinople 381 and Chalcedon 451 including theological disputes and spiritual movements Showing how they found significance in such an unlikely text leads on to the conclusion that the commentators are largely in agreement that the Song refers to a meeting of the Word of God in his incarnate form reaching out to all humanity and the collective humanity viewed in the obedient responsiveness of a bride This responsive collective humanity is described variously in terms of church believing soul soul of Christ and humanity of Christ Mark W Elliott selects specifically Christological readings i e those which interpret the Song with reference to the incarnation and gives some reasons for the demise of such an interpretation and of commentary writing as a whole during that period Sacrorum conciliorum nova et amplissima collectio ... Catholic Church.
