Learning Directory, 1970 Flak Edward B. Westermann, 2001 Air raid sirens wail searchlight beams flash across the sky and the night is aflame with tracer fire and aerial explosions as Allied bombers and German anti aircraft units duel in the thundering darkness Such cinematic scenes played out with increasing frequency as World War II ground to a close were more than mere stock material for movie melodramas As Edward Westermann reveals they point to a key but largely unappreciated aspect of the German war effort that has yet to get its full due Long the neglected stepchild in studies of World War II air campaigns German flak or anti aircraft units have been frequently dismissed by American British and German historians and by veterans of the European air war as ineffective weapons that wasted valuable materiel and personnel resources desperately needed elsewhere by the Third Reich Westermann emphatically disagrees with that view and makes a convincing case for the significant contributions made by the entire range of German anti aircraft defenses During the Allied air campaigns against the Third Reich well over a million tons of bombs were dropped upon the German homeland killing nearly 300 000 civilians wounding another 780 000 and destroying more than 3 500 000 industrial and residential structures Not surprisingly that aerial Armageddon has inspired countless studies of both the victorious Allied bombing offensive and the ultimately doomed Luftwaffe defense of its own skies By contrast flak units have virtually been ignored despite the fact that they employed more than a million men and women were responsible for more than half of all Allied aircraft losses forced Allied bombers to fly far above high accuracy altitudes and thus allowed Germany to hold out far longer than it might have otherwise Westermann's definitive study sheds new light on every facet of the development and organization of this vital defense arm including
