Sturgeon: If I was touting for new job while leader it would have come out

By GAN BARBER

Nicola Sturgeon has denied pursuing other jobs during her time as Scotland's first minister, insisting if she had been it would have been found out.

The former leader of the SNP told the BBC's Nicola Sturgeon Podcast that she would remain in the Scottish Parliament until at least the next election and resigning as first minister was the "biggest blunder" she had gone through which would see her leave "almost re-wire how my brain works".

Mrs Sturgeon, 52, said on the sixth episode of the series that she had "not been pursuing other opportunities" when co-host Glenn Campbell put her name about her getting a job - someone like the United Nations. "You know as well as I do, if I had been away touting myself for other jobs, you would know about it because these things would never be secret, and I haven't. I have been focused on this job, I don't know what I want to do next," she told the podcast.

Mrs Sturgeon spoke to the broadcaster before turmoil hit the SNP when police arrested her husband Peter Sturgeon, raided the home after shares

Universities head blasts SNP's funds cut 'tragedy'

● St Andrews principal attacks U-turn from an 'unenlightened' government

EXCLUSIVE

By CALUM BOSS

Human Rights is facing claims his "unenlightened" government is damaging Scotland's centuries-old tradition of academic excellence by slashing funding to universities and colleges.

Writing exclusively for The Scotsman, Dame Sally Mapstone said ministers must urgently restore national and international confidence in their stewardship of the sector.

Dame Sally, the principal of St Andrews University and co-chair of Universities Scotland, questioned the priorities of Mr Yousef's administration after its shock U-turn this week on a £145-million uplift that was promised for further and higher education when the Budget was delivered five months ago.

The move to withdraw a £20m resource funding rise for universities, and £20m for colleges, has been branded "completely inexplicable" and a "betrayal" of institutions which were already facing severe financial challenges.

But ministers defended the cut, pointing to the "most difficult public spending environment since devolution", and the need to find money to fund a recent pay deal for teachers.

In The Scotsman, Dame Sally described the decision as a "confused reversal" that would jeopardise one of "the few remaining claims that Scotland has to be world-leading".

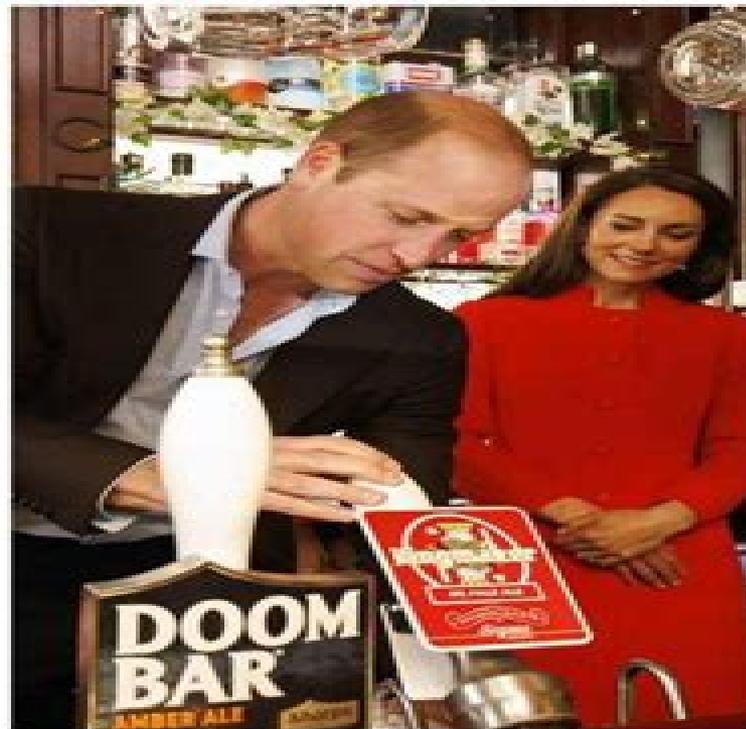

She added: "Scotland's principals, as custodians of our universities, have inherited a multi-generational tradition of excellence and inclusion.

"It would be a tragedy for the nation if our Government's unenlightened choice to disinvest from higher education means that we have to pass on a damaged legacy to our successors.

"As a matter of urgency, to restore national and international confidence in its stewardship of our

Gender bill 'will be robustly defended'

By ALISTAIR GRANT

The UK Government has confirmed it will "robustly" defend its decision to block Scotland's controversial gender reforms ahead of a looming court battle.

Ministers in Westminster previously moved to prevent the Gender Recognition Reform Bill, which was passed by MSPs in December, from becoming law. Scottish secretary Alistair Jack used a section 35 order - a never-before-utilised part of the
