Nukkin Ya:

Nukkin Ya Phillip Gwynne, 2000 Nukkin Ya is the sequel to Deadly Unna. Fifteen year old Gary Black Blacky isn't sure what he wants or where he is going. The one thing he does know is that he wants to escape the small country town he's grown up in. Reading Race Clare Bradford, 2013-05-09 How do children's books relate to the cultures that produce them and how do they influence those cultures? In Reading Race Clare Bradford looks at representations of Australia's indigenous peoples in texts for children. She shows how these varying representations have helped to colour the attitudes, beliefs and assumptions of different generations of Australians. To what extent have children's books enabled readers to understand Aboriginal culture, relations between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people and relationships between Aboriginality and national identity? Bradford draws on examples from popular and literary children's books of all genres: fiction, non-fiction, picture books and school texts. She reveals that many children's books display the tensions and uncertainties inherent in relations between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people. Bradford also uncovers the different ideologies of race that have informed Australian children's texts from the nineteenth century to currently popular writers, demonstrating cultural shifts in the representation of Aboriginality over time. The result is a ground-breaking and intelligent picture of how Australian children's books by both white and Aboriginal writers have negotiated the matter of race. Reading Race will enhance the ways in which we come to read and understand the complex and delicate issues around Aboriginal-white relations. It will be an invaluable resource in the fields of post-colonial studies, Indigenous and Aboriginal studies, literary and cultural studies and children's literature.

German-Australian Encounters and Cultural Transfers Benjamin Nickl, Irina Herrschner, Elżbieta M. Goździak, 2018-01-12 This book approaches Australo-German relations from comparative and interdisciplinary perspectives. It maps new pathways into the rich landscape of the Australo-German transnational encounter which is characterized by dense and interwoven cultural, historical and political terrains. Surveying an astonishingly wide range of sites from literary translations to film festivals, Aboriginal art to education systems, the contributions offer a uniquely expansive dossier on the migrations of people, ideas, technologies, money and culture between the two countries. The links between Australia and Germany are explored from a variety of new interdisciplinary perspectives and situated within key debates in literary and cultural studies, critical theory, politics, linguistics and transnational studies. The book gathers unique contributions that span the areas of migration, Aboriginality, popular culture, music, media and institutional structures to create a dynamic portrait of the exchanges between these two nations over time. Australo-German relations have emerged from intersecting histories of colonialism, migration, communication, tourism and socio-cultural representation into the dramatically changed twenty-first century where traditional channels of connection between nations in the Western hemisphere have come undone but new channels ensure cross-fertilization between newly constituted borders. The True Story of Spit MacPhee James Aldridge, 2015-01-02 When young Spit MacPhee comes to live with his grandfather, the people of the Australian country town of St Helen fear for his
