

HISTORY OF MUSIC.

MUSIC IN THE PREHISTORY AND ANCIENT TIMES:

It is probable that the first musical instrument was the human voice, whistles, clapping hands, making noises with sticks... In 2008 archaeologists discovered a bone flute in a cave in Germany. It is considered to be about 35,000 years old. The five-holed flute was made from a vulture wing bone.

The ancient flute made of bone.

MUSIC IN GREECE:

In Greece, music was an important part of ancient Greek theatre. Their choruses sang for entertainment, celebration and spiritual reasons. There were wind and string instruments like the lyre and kithara. Music was an important part of education in ancient Greece, and boys studied music starting at age of six.

Musicians in the Middle Ages.

MEDIEVAL MUSIC:

The most important written repertory of music was religious music of the Roman Catholic Church, the largest part of it is called 'Gregorian chant'. Pope Gregory I gave his name to this musical repertory, written in latin and sang in churches.

Much of the surviving music of that time are special songs from troubadours like ballades... (narrative poems or songs about medieval adventures and romances). Troubadours also played different instruments.

Music in the Renaissance.

MUSIC IN RENAISSANCE:

It was born in northern Europe (north of France, the Netherlands and Belgium). By the middle of the 15th century, composers and singers spreaded this music across Europe, specially into Italy. This music was listened in churches, palaces, castles, villages...

The invention of printing press had an immense influence on the dissemination of musical styles. The most famous type of composition was 'the madrigal'.
