Post Covid-19 Neurological Syndrome Tissa Wijeratne, Sheila Crewther, 2026-02-11. This book represents a groundbreaking contribution to the field of neurology, addressing a critical gap in our understanding of the long-term neurological effects of Covid-19. Crafted by frontline researchers, it offers invaluable insights into Post Covid-19 Neurological Syndrome (PCNS), a condition first described by the editors themselves in 2020. Through a comprehensive synthesis, this volume explores PCNS in the context of the sustainable development goals and the 2030 agenda, providing an up-to-date overview across the spectrum of this syndrome. Comprising both general chapters delving into the pathobiological mechanisms of PCNS, the intricate relationship between Covid-19 infection and brain involvement, as well as a review of current research and barriers to accessing care, this book offers a holistic understanding of the subject matter. Furthermore, it addresses potential therapeutic options and contemporary issues within the framework of the WHO intersectoral global action plan (IGAP) and SDG 3, offering a global perspective on tackling this pressing issue. Neurologists worldwide will benefit greatly from the insights presented in this book, providing them with essential knowledge for diagnosing and treating cases of PCNS, particularly in situations where clinical experience with the condition may be limited. Additionally, international organizations, policymakers, and non-governmental organizations engaged in health and Covid-19 pandemic response efforts will find this resource invaluable. Anticipated to become an indispensable addition to neurological department libraries, this book will serve as a fundamental textbook for teaching neurology. Its profound exploration of the impact of Covid-19 on brain health ensures its relevance for generations to come, solidifying its place as a cornerstone in advancing our understanding and management of neurological sequelae associated with the pandemic.

Epilepsy Across the Spectrum Institute of Medicine, Board on Health Sciences Policy, Committee on the Public Health Dimensions of the Epilepsies, 2012-07-29. Although epilepsy is one of the nation's most common neurological disorders, public understanding of it is limited. Many people do not know the causes of epilepsy or what they should do if they see someone having a seizure. Epilepsy is a complex spectrum of disorders that affects an estimated 2.2 million Americans in a variety of ways and is characterized by unpredictable seizures that differ in type, cause, and severity. Yet living with epilepsy is about much more than just seizures; the disorder is often defined in practical terms such as challenges in school, uncertainties about social situations, and employment limitations on driving and questions about independent living. The Institute of Medicine was asked to examine the public health dimensions of the epilepsies, focusing on public health surveillance and data collection, population and public health research, health policy, health care, and human services, and education for people with the disorder and their families, health care providers, and the public. In Epilepsy Across the Spectrum, the IOM makes recommendations ranging from the expansion of collaborative epilepsy surveillance efforts to the coordination of public awareness efforts to the engagement of people with epilepsy and their families in education, dissemination, and advocacy for improved care and services. Taking action across multiple dimensions will improve the lives of people with epilepsy and their families. The realistic, feasible, and action-oriented recommendations in this report can help enable short and long-term
