

Active Transport

Calcium pumps

- Move calcium ions across muscle cell membranes into the sarcoplasmic reticulum (surrounds muscle fibers)
- Ca ions from sarcoplasmic reticulum to cell cause contractions
- Contraction ends when Ca is actively pumped back out of the cell.
- Concentration of Ca outside the cell is over 1,000x greater than in cytoplasm

A. Calcium ions bind to a calcium transporter (calcium pump).

B. A phosphate group is transferred from ATP to the pump. The pump changes shape so that it ejects the calcium ions to the opposite side of the membrane, and then returns to original shape.
