Process Management Hans de Bruijn, Ernst ten Heuvelhof, Roel in 't Veld, 2010-08-13 End profit and loss account As a result there will be a stage at which the parties have developed relations and prospects of gain while there are still a number of problems that are difficult to solve and that fail to evoke consensus Each party will then draw up a profit and loss account On the positive side of the balance are the relations developed and the gains collected on the negative side there are the losses and the unsolved problems For particular parties who have no interest in the problem the latter side is uninteresting for others who have an interest in a particular solution of this problem it represents a form of loss Profit and loss balance positive for a critical mass speed The speed of the process will increase if the profit and loss account shows a positive balance for a critical mass of parties They wish to collect their gains and therefore to make rational decisions At this point there will be an important psychological mechanism parties tend to anticipate on collecting their gains which increases their urge to speed up the process It is clear from the above however that the end of a process is difficult to predict
