Chapter 13

Process Evaluation and Implementation Theory

"A single governmental strategy may involve the complex and interrelated activities of several levels of governmental bureaus and agencies, private organizations, professional associations, interest groups, and clientele populations. How can this profusion of activities be controlled and directed? This question is at the heart of what has come to be known ... as the "implementation problem."

-Eugene Bardach

The extent to which government interventions contribute to measured results is central to public sector evaluation. Occasionally, evaluations ought to aspire to even higher ambitions. They should try to answer why outcomes do or do not stem from the measures enacted. Following the lead of Urban Dahllöf and several other scholars, I wish to emphasize strongly that the evaluation of at least established interventions should have this extended explanatory ambition. Apart from data on output, outcomes, and general intervention impact on results, evaluations should include more specific information on why installed interventions have succeeded or failed. The evaluation of vintage measures ought to be a theoretical enterprise in the meaning of trying to explain in more detail why the measures have conditioned the impacts or not. I shall call this process evaluation.

Palumbo,1987 Evaluation and politics are related in a number of ways While programme evaluators have traditionally tried to be neutral objective and scientific in their assessment of programmes the results of evaluation are inherently political and are used by politicians programme administrators special interest groups and other stakeholders for political purposes The contributors argue that since evaluation cannot be divorced from its political context the political dimension must be understood in order to conduct effective evaluations Social Experimentation, Program Evaluation, and Public Policy Maureen A. Gasik, 2022-11-25 Many governments have effectively organized public project implementation systems in their jurisdictions At the same time many other countries remain at a less advanced level of public project management Globally there is a need for project management knowledge to be transferred between governments However no systematic review of these practices has been developed to date Projects Government and Public Policy was written to fulfill this need and presents a review of project management practices in countries with developed project based capabilities This book uses its own rigorous model to present this review systematically This book s practical purpose is to give a structured overview of government level project management practices This knowledge can be used in the work of governments to improve the management of public projects and the implementation of public policies Many professionals working in public institutions understand project management concepts differently than project management professionals Therefore this book begins with a chapter that describes the differences between the conceptual basis of public administration and project management. The body of this book has five parts. Part I is mainly intended for those involved in government and public administration who want to acquire or increase knowledge about project management. Part II provides an overview of the basic concepts from the theory of public administration, public policies, and development management. Part III describes what makes public projects unique and the success factors specific to projects of this sector. Knowledge about effective government project management practices is covered in Part IV. The concluding Part V begins with a general overview of the maturity model concept. Its main part covers the description of a maturity model showing ways to systematically improve the implementation of public projects. This book is written for governments and government administrators including the most influential decision makers who craft policies to guide a country's development as well as how to implement projects. This book is also intended for supporters and enthusiasts of project management in government and public administration by providing them with a description of the solutions used by project management in public administration. This book is intended too for all project management practitioners working for public projects: project managers, team members, sponsors, and middle level executives of project delivering private companies. By knowing public administration concepts they can manage their projects better and use a common language with their clients.

Program Evaluation and the Management of Government Eliot Freidson, Ray Rist, 2020-02-18. This book appears at an opportune time in the history of evaluation. Its detailed and up to date account of the organization and use of evaluation in eight Western democratic countries: Canada, Germany, United Kingdom, United States, Denmark, Holland, Norway, and Switzerland shows how evaluation functions at different levels of development. Focusing on the national or federal level of government, this volume presents a systematic and comparative view of eight nations at different stages of the development, institutionalization, and utilization of evaluations. All of these original contributions have been written by academics and government officials involved in the production and use of evaluation findings. Each shows how their respective country has moved to institutionalize evaluation at the federal level and each explores the reasons for that institutionalization. Among them are managerial accountability, the increased complexity of the decisions facing policymakers, federally sponsored social change that needs to be tracked and assessed, and the increasing recognition that political power comes to those who possess such information. Program Evaluation and the Management of Government is tightly integrated. The contributions share coherence, a common analytic framework, and use of key terms resulting from the authors' three year dialogue as members of the Working Group on Policy and Program Evaluation sponsored by the International Institute for Administrative Sciences located in Belgium. Their shared commitment to working together has given us the first systematic effort to assess evaluation across such a large number of countries. It will be of interest to applied social scientists and policymakers especially those interested in comparative research. Program Evaluation in the Public Sector Albert C. Hyde, Jay M.
