Dialogues Des Cultures : [proceedings of the XI Congress of the International Comparative Literature Association] Haga Toru,International Comparative Literature Association. Congress,2000 More than ever comparative literature sees as its task the international study of literatures which means that the entire spectrum of world literature is potentially its field of exploration Today this means much more than studying relations between national literatures neatly contained within the borders of national states transnationality is everywhere in a multiplicity of diasporas exiles and multinational linguistic communities spanning the world but also within multicultural countries and megacities It means that in the global village the possibility exists and must exist not only to study the literatures closest to one s own but those of the Other in complete reciprocity and not only from the vantage point of one s own culture but with a mind open to patterns methods visions very distant from one s own In Dialogues of Cultures twenty two authors have come to grips with this necessity studying self critically with open minds and a variety of comparative methods first aspects of East West relations but East and West must be understood in the broadest and most symbolical sense and secondly aspects of intra European relations
