Since the American Heartworm Society (AHS) was formed in 1974, hundreds of heartworm researchers, veterinarians, students and others have convened every three years for a scientific conference that features the world's leading experts on heartworm disease. Hosting this important symposium is one of the most important investments the AHS makes in fulfilling our mission of leading the veterinary profession and the pet-owning public in the understanding of heartworm disease.

The 2019 symposium, which was held September 8-11, 2019, in New Orleans, featured 62 speakers and poster presenters and was attended by representatives from 35 states and 12 countries.

While it's not possible to share all of the information from the 2019 Triennial Symposium in just a few short pages, we wanted to bring you some of the key findings. In this Clinician's Brief supplement, we've posed a series of questions to a group of speakers and moderators who took the stage at the symposium. We hope the answers will prove interesting and of value to you in your daily practice. Meanwhile, I recommend you mark your calendars now for the next Triennial Heartworm Symposium, which will be held September 8-11, 2022, in New Orleans.
