

COLOUR

Grey clouds loom in the sky. Grey sky. Grey streets. Everything is colourless in this dull city. Even the people are grey. Boring. We used to have colourful markets in this part of the city – rainbow stands with cheery old men standing behind them boisterously shouting their bargains of the day and making jokes with the regulars and locals which made me excited. But now all that's left are the homeless and some bits of rubbish tumbling about on the dirty street. The putrid odour and unappealing appearance of these people makes me uneasy. A tram pulls up and businessmen in ubiquitous grey suits hop off in a bustle with every single one of them occupied with their own troubles, disclosing deep trenches of stress evident across their foreheads. Looking down at my hands elicit that they are also grey. Where has the colour gone?

A small boy, maybe 8 or 9 years old, was sitting against the wall - his hands cupped together begging for money and his clothes dirty and worn. Having grown up with enough money for food, clothing and a little extra to spend at the sweet shop occasionally, I allow sympathy and guilt to drown me. Quickly, I fumble in my back pockets for some coins or notes – a $20 note which I drop into his small hands and his face immediately brightens up and his cheeks turn a rosy pink – the first colour I have seen in ages! Tears are welling in his eyes, but he is glowing with happiness, when he surprises me with a quick hug around the waist as he could not reach any higher up. Before I could react, he releases me and runs off to a rundown building that I assume is his house, calling out for his mother. I smile to myself as I begin to walk towards the building.

I call out for the boy again but an older looking woman in ragged clothing appears out of the dark interior, staring at me with fear in her eyes. The only lighting in the building was the eerie sunlight that crept inside from the cracks between the boards of a blocked up window. The building was derelict and its musty smell was beginning to make me feel nauseous. I felt guilty about the empty rooms in my own house and offered the woman some money and she took me to the boy's house. The boy was sitting on the floor, looking up at me with a look of awe. I gave him the money and he ran to his mother. The woman thanked me and I walked away. The boy's house was a small, one-roomed building. The woman told me that the boy's mother was ill and that the boy was the only one who could take care of her. I felt sorry for the woman and the boy and I gave them some more money. The woman thanked me and I walked away.

After a while, I thought of the boy and the woman and I felt sorry for them. I decided to go back and see them. I found the woman sitting on the floor, looking up at me with a look of awe. I gave her the money and she ran to the boy. The boy was sitting on the floor, looking up at me with a look of awe. I gave him the money and he ran to his mother. The woman thanked me and I walked away.

A few months of seeing the boy, the woman and the boy's mother, I felt sorry for them. I decided to go back and see them. I found the woman sitting on the floor, looking up at me with a look of awe. I gave her the money and she ran to the boy. The boy was sitting on the floor, looking up at me with a look of awe. I gave him the money and he ran to his mother. The woman thanked me and I walked away.
