

Shrinking / Declining Cities

The definition of a shrinking city formulated by the Shrinking Cities International Research Network (SCIRN) states that: 'a densely populated urban area that has on the one hand faced a population loss in large parts of it (for at least 5 years, more than 0.15 % annually), and is on the other hand undergoing economic transformation with some symptoms of a structural crisis'.

In what follows, trends are assessed for Functional Urban Areas (FUA), corresponding to urban centres and their commuting area.

studies of cities within Mexico Brazil Indonesia Germany France Great Britain South Korea Australia and the USA which consider specific economic social environmental cultural and land use issues Quietly Shrinking Cities Maxwell Hartt,2021-04-01 At 5 percent Canada s population growth was the highest of all G7 countries when the most recent census was taken But only a handful of large cities drove that growth attracting human and monetary capital from across the country and leaving myriad social economic and environmental challenges behind Quietly Shrinking Cities investigates a trend that has been largely overlooked over 20 percent of Canadian cities shrank between 2011 and 2016 and twice that proportion grew more slowly than the national average Yet continuous ubiquitous growth is considered normal and policy and planning professionals have had little success in managing the practical challenges associated with population loss Declining birth rates and an aging population only compound the phenomenon This meticulous work demonstrates that shrinking cities need to rethink their planning and development strategies in response to a new demographic reality questioning whether population loss and prosperity are indeed mutually exclusive Shrinking Cities :: INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH ; V.2.
