Organ-building in Georgian and Victorian England Nicholas Thistlethwaite, 2020 Established for the building of keyboard instruments by the mid 1790s the workshop of brothers Robert and William Gray had become one of the leading organ makers in London with instruments in St Paul s Covent Garden and St Martin in the Fields Under William s son John Gray the firm built some of the largest English organs of the 1820s and 1830s as well as exporting major instruments to Boston and Charleston in the United States In the early 1840s with the marriage of John Gray s daughter to Frederick Davison a member of the circle of Bach enthusiasts around the composer Samuel Wesley the firm became Gray they were designed to perform a repertoire dominated by orchestral transcriptions Many of the instruments made by the firm have been lost or altered but the surviving organs in St Anne Limehouse 1851 Usk Parish Church 1861 and Clumber Chapel 1889 testify to the quality and importance of Gray Davison s work This book charts the firm s history from its foundation in 1772 to Frederick Davison s death in 1889 At the same time it describes changes in musical taste and liturgical use and explores such topics as provincial music festivals the town hall organ domestic music making and popular entertainment the building of churches and the impact on church music of the Evangelical and Tractarian movements It will appeal to organ aficionados interested in the evolution of the English organ in the later Georgian and Victorian eras as well as other music scholars and cultural historians NICHOLAS THISTLETHWAITE has written extensively on the history of the English organ and other aspects of English church music and his book The making of the Victorian organ 1990 is recognised as the standard work on the subject He has acted as consultant for the restoration and rebuilding of organs most recently at St Edmundsbury Cathedral and Christ Church

Studies in English Organ Music Iain Quinn, 2018-06-14 Studies in English Organ Music is a collection of essays by expert authors that examines key areas of the repertoire in the history of organ music in England The essays on repertoire are placed alongside supporting studies in organ building and liturgical practice in order to provide a comprehensive contextualization An analysis of the symbiotic relationship between the organ liturgy and composers reveals how the repertoire has been shaped by these complementary areas and developed through history This volume is the first collection of specialist studies related to the field of English organ music

Music and Institutions in Nineteenth-Century Britain Dr Paul Rodmell, 2012-12-28 In nineteenth century British society music and musicians were organized as they had never been before This organization was manifested in part by the introduction of music into powerful institutions both out of belief in music s inherently beneficial properties and also to promote music occupations and professions in society at large This book provides a representative and varied sample of the interactions between music and organizations in various locations in the nineteenth century British Empire exploring not only how and why music was institutionalized but also how and why institutions became musicalized Individual essays explore amateur societies that promoted music making institutions that played host to music making groups both amateur and professional music in diverse educational institutions and the relationships between music and what might be referred to as the institutions of state Through all of the essays runs the theme of the various ways in which institutions of varying formality and rigidity interacted with music and musicians and the mutual benefit and exploitation that resulted from that interaction

Vincent Novello (1781-1861) Fiona M. Palmer,2006 Today Vincent Novello 1781 1861 is remembered as the father of the music publishing firm Fiona Palmer s evaluation of Novello is the first to provide a rounded view of his life and work and the nature of his importance both in his own time and to posterity In his wide ranging editorial work Novello found his true vocation positioning himself as preservationist pioneer and philanthropist His work as composer though unremarkable in quality mirrored the demands and expectations of his consumers Novello emerges from this study as a visionary who single mindedly pursued greater musical knowledge for the benefit of everyone
