Slow Travel and Tourism Janet Dickinson, Les Lumsdon, 2010-09-23 It is widely recognized that travel and tourism can have a high environmental impact and make a major contribution to climate change It is therefore vital that ways to reduce these impacts are developed and implemented Slow travel provides such a concept drawing on ideas from the slow food movement with a concern for locality ecology and quality of life The aim of this book is to define slow travel and to discuss how some underlining values are likely to pervade new forms of sustainable development It also aims to provide insights into the travel experience these are explored in several chapters which bring new knowledge about sustainable transport tourism from across the world In order to do this the book explores the concept of slow travel and sets out its core ingredients comparing it with related frameworks such as low carbon tourism and sustainable tourism development The authors explain slow travel as holiday travel where air and car transport is rejected in favour of more environmentally benign forms of overland transport which generally take much longer and become incorporated as part of the holiday experience. The book critically examines the key trends in tourism transport and recent climate change debates setting out the main issues facing tourism planners. It reviews the potential for new consumption patterns as well as current business models that facilitate hyper mobility. This provides a cutting edge critique of the upstream drivers to unsustainable tourism. Finally the authors illustrate their approach through a series of case studies from around the world featuring travel by train bus cycling and walking. Examples are drawn from Europe Asia Australia and the Americas. Cases include the Eurostar train as an alternative to air travel walking in the Appalachian Trail US the Euro Velo network of long distance cycling routes canoe tours on the Gudena River in Denmark sea kayaking in British Columbia Canada and the Oz Bus Europe to Australia.

Environmental Management and Cruise Ships Jens Kaulbars, 2008-06 Essay from the year 2008 in the subject Tourism Hotel Management University of Plymouth University of Plymouth course Managing Facilities language English abstract One of the currently most important topics worldwide is the environment mankind gradually destroying its natural surroundings at an alarming pace and what can be done to prevent our environment from meeting its premature fate which is closely tied to the one mankind will face. Thus protecting the environment means preserving the human race. As an issue affecting every part of life it is not surprising that the tourism industry has to deal with effective environmental management as well considering the best possible practice to balance environmental healthy actions with profit raising. Moreover as leisure industry tourism is under immense pressure because it is not considered essential remaining classified as a luxury good. Hayes 2004 although most people won't necessarily agree with this anymore. Nevertheless it therefore provides an easy target for the attacks of environmental activists. This alone generating a bad reputation and not even considering ethical aspects makes it clear that environmental management in tourism is very important. In the end breeding cattle or growing rice maybe more devastating for the environment but plays a rather crucial part in maintaining life. Whereas it seems obvious that for example flying around the globe to a variety of destinations cannot possibly be as essential in retaining life on earth. Another issue that needs to be taken into consideration is the marvellous marketing effect positive environmental management creates. Most people love doing something good and protective for their environment while having a great time being on vacation. The solution so it seems are environment caring types of holidays. And if the modern forms of spending vacation are harming the environment why not coming back to more traditional types of holiday. The Garden, 2005 A Cruise into the Future Maik Roemer, 2010-11-24 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2009 in the subject Tourism Miscellaneous Stralsund University of Applied Sciences language English abstract There is no doubt that international tourism expanded significantly in the last decade. Especially the cruise industry did an extraordinary performance with its two digit growth rates and investments in billions range. The tourism industry is the so called leading economy of the 21st century and the cruise industry is one of the master performers within the tourism industry The big three players Carnival Corporation Royal Caribbean Cruises and Star Cruises Group made in 2005 over 22billion in revenues and profits more than 3billion How could the german cruise market look like in 2025 But will this development going on for the next years or decades This assignment will introduce the state of the art of the cruise industry and discuss trends and developments within economy and society It will be discussed how these developments are affecting the tourism industry with a focus on the cruise industry The final discussion of findings will try to conceptualise a picture of the future of the cruise market covering the next 15 years The conclusion could give some references how to act to be prepared for the future
