

The Countries with the HIGHEST PRICE OF HAPPINESS

The price of happiness in Iran is an income of $239,700, the highest total out of 173 countries. According to Iran International, record-high inflation in early 2023 has sent the cost of food in the country soaring by upwards of 70%. Australia carries the third-highest happiness price tag ($121,191), befitting the world's 13th most expensive country in which to live (according to Numbeo).

ANNUAL PRICE OF HAPPINESS IN USD

METHODOLOGY: From a Purdue University study ("Happiness, Income Satiation and Turning Points around the World"), we retrieved each world region's satiation point for Life Evaluation (LIFE) in USD, i.e., the income level at which a further increase in income has no effect on an individual's happiness. These incomes were from the reference point of an American's purchasing power (i.e., 100% for Egypt) and the local income at which you could pay for the equivalent of 100% of goods in the U.S., so we converted them back to local currencies using the country-specific Purchasing Power Parity from the IMF. Converting this figure into USD using the current exchange rate allowed us to compare the actual price of happiness in each country in dollars.
