Distributed leadership has become an important term for educational policymakers, practitioners, and researchers in the United States and around the world, but there is much diversity in how the term is understood. Some use it as a synonym for democratic or participative leadership. This book examines what it means to take a distributed perspective based on extensive research and a rich theoretical perspective developed by experts in the field. Including numerous case studies of individual schools and providing empirically based accounts of school settings using a distributed perspective, this thorough volume explores how a distributed perspective is different from other frameworks for thinking about leadership. Provides clear examples of how taking a distributed perspective can help researchers understand and connect more directly to leadership practice. Illustrates how the day-to-day practice of leadership is an important line of inquiry for scholars and for those interested in improving school leadership. Educational Research Quarterly, 1998. Journal of Research and Development in Education, 1996. Making Sense As a School Leader Richard H. Ackerman, Gordon A. Donaldson, Jr., Rebecca van der Bogert, 1996. A real contribution to an over-discussed subject. This book reaches below the surface to the real issues and relationships that confront principals in their orchestration of the daily affairs of teachers, parents, and students. Harold Howe II, former president of the Ford Foundation for Education and Public Policy. Based on the work of the prestigious Harvard Principals

Center this book shares some of the sense that practicing principals have made of their own complex experiences The authors offer real life case examples of typical leadership dilemmas in such areas as student discipline teacher assessment fiscal management parental involvement and schoolwide planning Program Evaluation ,1998 The Personnel Function in Educational Administration William B. Castetter,1992 Empowering Teachers and Parents G Alfred Hess,1992-07-13 A much needed examination of the impact on teachers and parents of the effort to improve our schools through restructuring this book looks at professionalization and parent empowerment programs from the ground level rather than from the large scale policy level The editor active in both policy setting and monitoring implementation approaches the subject with an overarching view that weaves together a set of diverse case studies that examine some of the most notable efforts in this area of school reform The first section demonstrates the tremendous difficulties involved in attempting to reshape the culture of public school teaching noting both institutional resistance to change and the personal resistance of the professionals who are in theory being empowered through this approach The second section details the problems of launching parent empowerment opportunities in a large urban setting and a contrasting case examines the choice of enrollment option Here too these studies examine the effectiveness of these programs The conclusion reflects on the opportunities such innovations provide for researchers and assesses the importance of such research in shaping the innovations themselves through evaluations while they are in process
