Oculomotor Control And Cognitive Processes:

Oculomotor Control and Cognitive Processes Roberto Schmid, Daniela Zambarbieri, 1991 This volume contains selected and edited papers from the fifth European Conference on Eye Movements ECEM 5 held at the University of Pavia Italy on September 10-13 1989 The volume is organized in six sections as follows Neurophysiology of Eye Movements Control of Eye Movements Eye Head Coordination Eye Movements in Pathology Eye Movements and Cognitive Processes and Applied Research The last section also contains some papers derived from the satellite symposium on Visual Processes and Eye Movements in Dyslexia which was organized by the Roding Remediation Foundation

Eye Movements and Their Role in Visual and Cognitive Processes Eileen Kowler, 1990 This is the first book to deal exclusively with oculomotor performance in a series that up to this point has been devoted largely to reviews of research on oculomotor anatomy and physiology The publication of this volume signifies the recognition of the fact that a genuine understanding of eye movement will not come about through the study of neurons alone We need to know about the capacity to make different kinds of eye movement and about how such oculomotor capacity is used to accomplish different sorts of visual and cognitive tasks i.e. how the eye can move and why it moves in particular ways Research on respective topics was critically evaluated by the contributing authors resulting in a controversial and up to date appraisal of this subject

Processes of Visuospatial Attention and Working Memory Timothy Hodgson, 2019-11-19 This volume covers a broad range of current research topics addressing the function of visuospatial attention and working memory It discusses a variety of perspectives ranging from evolutionary and genetic underpinnings to neural substrates computational processes and the connection between attention and working memory Contributions address the topic at the molecular system and evolutionary scales and will be of interest to a range of audiences from animal behaviour specialists experimental psychologists to clinicians in the field of psychiatry and neurology

Emotion regulation and cognitive processes Carmen Moret-Tatay, Vilfredo De Pascalis, 2023-08-24

Cognitive Processes in Eye Guidance Geoffrey D. M. Underwood, 2005 Whether reading looking at a picture or driving how is it that we know where to look next how does the human visual system calculate where our gaze should be directed in order to achieve our cognitive aims This book brings together leading vision scientists studying eye movements across a range of activities such as reading driving computer activities and chess It provides groundbreaking new research that will help us understand how it is that we know where to move our eyes and thereby better understand the cognitive processes underlying these activities

Exploratory Vision Michael S. Landy, Laurence T. Maloney, Misha Pavel, 2012-12-06 Advances in sensing signal processing and computer technology during the past half century have stimulated numerous attempts to design general purpose machines that see These attempts have met with at best modest success and more typically outright failure The difficulties encountered in building working computer vision systems based on state of the art techniques came as a surprise Perhaps the most frustrating aspect of the problem is that machine vision systems cannot deal with numerous visual tasks that humans perform rapidly and effortlessly. In reaction to this perceived discrepancy in performance, various researchers, notably Marr (1982), suggested that the design of machine vision systems should be based on principles drawn from the study of biological systems. This neuro-morphic or anthropomorphic approach has proven fruitful: the use of pyramid multi-resolution image representation methods in image compression is one example of a successful application based on principles primarily derived from the study of biological vision systems. It is still the case, however, that the performance of computer vision systems falls far short of that of the natural systems because they are intended to mimic, suggesting that it is time to look even more closely at the remaining differences between artificial and biological vision systems.

Contemporary Ocular Motor and Vestibular Research Albert F. Fuchs, 1994. This book contains the proceedings of an International Eibsee Meeting held in Garmisch-Partenkirchen in 1993. It should be of interest to ophthalmologists, neurologists, and otolaryngologists.

Eye Movements and Information Processing During Reading Ralph Radach, Alan Kennedy, Keith Rayner, 2004. Measurement and analysis of eye movements are two of the most powerful ways to study the workings of the human mind. This Special Issue on eye movements and information processing in reading presents an overview of experimental research based on this methodology. Eye movements provide a unique opportunity to examine principles of human information processing in a well-structured visual environment while people engage in a natural cognitive task. At the same time, oculomotor measures can be used as a tool to develop and test psycholinguistic hypotheses about the processing of written language. The papers in this issue contribute to both aspects, addressing issues that dominate current debates in the field. Seen from the angle of visual information processing, a major theme is the role played by parafoveal information for different types and levels of processing and for oculomotor control in reading. This includes effects of visual and linguistic word properties on the selection of words for fixation and the specification of saccade amplitudes. Clearly, the most controversial question in this context concerns the allocation of attention with positions ranging from a sequentially moving spotlight to a gradient of spatially distributed processing. Related to this is the issue of serial vs. parallel word processing and the fundamental question as to what extent the duration of fixations in reading is related to lexical processing. Taking a psycholinguistic perspective, the topics addressed include several levels of language processing from orthography to pragmatic information in sentence reading. New approaches to the study of morphologically complex words are reported together with novel work revealing the complex nature of the apparently accessible but elusive concept of word frequency. Other papers reflect current theoretical discussions centered on the development of computational models of the reading process and contribute to the empirical base of these discussions. Taken together, this collection of papers, supplemented by an introduction to the field and a commentary on major issues, presents a comprehensive and up-to-date perspective on a research area currently characterized by numerous theoretical and empirical disputes. The papers will be of particular appeal to readers interested in basic and applied psycholinguistics, attention, and
