

Chapter 16: Managing Care in Secondary and Tertiary Health Care
Claywell: LPN to RN Transitions, 5th Edition

MULTIPLE CHOICE

1. The nurse is listening to a lecture on the Orem's theory. Which statement indicates that teaching has been effective?
  - a. "Patients enter the acute health care setting when they are experiencing a dependent-care agency."
  - b. "Patients enter the acute health care setting when they are experiencing a community-care agency."
  - c. "Patients enter the acute health care setting when they are experiencing a dependent-care deficit."
  - d. "Patients enter the acute health care setting when they are experiencing a community-care deficit."

ANS: C

At various times in life, a person will have a health care demand, either a self-care or dependent-care demand that exceeds his or her self-care agency. When this happens, the person is said to have a self-care or dependent-care deficit. When this deficit is such that the person needs the specialized training of health care professionals, the person enters the health care setting and engages in a collaborative relationship with the RN and other health care team members. All other answer options are incorrect.

DIF: Cognitive Level: Evaluation

OBJ: Discuss the theoretical framework for managing in secondary care.

TOP: Managing Secondary Care

MSC: NCLEX: Safe and Effective Care Environment: Management of Care

2. The nurse is listening to a lecture on the acute care environment and the role of the RN. Which statement indicates that the teaching has been effective?
  - a. "The RN ensures more independence in self-care ability."
  - b. "The RN avoids discussing wait times as the patient progresses through the illness state."
  - c. "The RN changes the medical plan of care according to the RN's assessments."
  - d. "The RN delegates the majority of decisions to the medical assistants."

ANS: A

Acute health care requirements vary with the progress of the disease either toward a cure or through complications that can occur. The RN uses information from many different sources to identify potential and actual problems with the patient's progress. The overall focus is to prevent complications while promoting a higher level of health. Changing the medical plan of care is not the role of a nurse. The nurse would not delegate decision making to the medical assistant staff.

DIF: Cognitive Level: Evaluation

OBJ: Identify outcome priorities for secondary care.

TOP: Managing Secondary Care

MSC: NCLEX: Safe and Effective Care Environment: Management of Care
