Morgan,Richard L. Morgan,2006-04-01 Sooner or later each one of us faces death our own or others we care about And yet few take time beforehand to think about these endings and in the process may lose the wisdom of the ages that comes after facing death Perhaps this explains why when Plato was asked to summarize his philosophy he reportedly said Practice dying He understood that dying is what each one of us does throughout our lives whether it is leaving home the first time to go to school or departing from this planet when our lives end If we learn how to die to let go and get our egos out of the way we will have gained wisdom about how best to live This brief yet comprehensive book deals not only with the philosophical and psychological meaning of death but its practical implications for our lives Written by two brothers who have taught philosophy ethics psychology and religion at community colleges and four year private colleges this book can be used in many learning situations whether part of courses in philosophy ethics psychology or counseling or for short term workshops or continuing education courses for students in human services health care social work or any of the helping professions

The Encyclopedia of Death and Dying consolidates and contextualizes the disparate research that has been carried out to date. The phenomena of death and dying and its related concepts are explored and explained in depth from the approaches of varied disciplines and related professions in the arts, social sciences, humanities, medicine, and the sciences. In addition to scholars and students in the field from anthropologists and sociologists to art and social historians, the Encyclopedia will be of interest to other professionals and practitioners whose work brings them into contact with dying, dead, and bereaved people. It will be welcomed as the definitive death and dying reference source and an essential tool for teaching, research, and independent study.

An Anthology of Death, Dying, and the Living Atiba Rougier, 2022-01-16. An Anthology of Death, Dying, and the Living offers students a multifaceted, cross-disciplinary and intellectual exploration of death, what it means to be human, and what it means to truly live. Through a historic and anthropological lens, students read articles that address diverse domestic and international events and convene a variety of perspectives in terms of culture and identity as they relate to death, dying, and living. The anthology is divided into five distinct sections: Should We Fear Death? To Die is to Have Lived; Existential Death; Suicide; Death and the Family; Death and the Self; Grief, Mourning, and Elegies; and Biomedical Death: What Does it Mean to Die with Dignity? Each section features articles from a variety of sources that draw from the disciplines of anthropology, philosophy, psychology, sociology, biology, politics, government, and law, and religious studies. Students experience a holistic and complete examination of various understandings, interpretations, and viewpoints about life, death, and the interplay between the two. The revised first edition includes two new readings. The first is an article by the editor, Atiba Rougier, that considers the national and personal impacts of 9/11 and COVID-19, and the second is a piece by a gastroenterologist and chronicles how their role at a hospital changed during the pandemic. An accessible, emotional, and thought-provoking collection, An Anthology of Death, Dying, and the Living is well suited for courses that explore death and dying from a sociological, psychological, philosophical, or anthropological perspective.
