Kenneth Blanchard and Norman Vincent Peale

The Power of Ethical Management

New York: William Morrow and Company, 1988, 189 pp. $15.95.

"Integrity Pays! You don't have to cheat to win."

With these words Kenneth Blanchard, co-author of The One Minute Manager, and Norman Vincent Peale, author of The Power of Positive Thinking, introduce The Power of Ethical Management. This small book with the challenging thesis should be required reading for the public relations practitioner and the public relations student.

I teach public relations at a local college and I work in a public relations agency. In those settings, some consider winning the only worthwhile goal. Some colleagues want to win the account and the bank account. My students want a winning grade and the secrets for a winning career.

In these settings, too often the words ethics and integrity are perceived as if a self-indulgent speaker were speaking a forbidden word to describe a taboo topic.

Blanchard and Peal tackle the taboo—ethics and personal integrity. Their words are personal, direct and disturbing. The authors interrupt the flow of the narrative in order to make a point in big neon print in the middle of an almost blank page—"Managing ONLY for profit is like playing tennis with your eye on the scoreboard and not on the ball."

They make their points in simple, easily understood sentences—"A seagull manager flies in, makes a lot of noise, dumps on everyone and then flies out. That often starts a ripple effect. . . . And after saying that you're no good and can't be trusted, managers then expect you to be honest, loyal, and all those wonderful things."

Leading an ethical life isn't easy. No one said it would be. The authors don't offer simple solutions to difficult problems.

"When you find yourself in an environment or organizational culture that is inconsistent with your values and beliefs . . . you have three choices. The first choice is to resign . . . start your own business or join another company that appears to offer a more compatible ethical culture."

Blanchard and Peale force their readers to examine their own lives. And, sometimes that isn't easy going.

I plan to have my students read this little book. And, I'm planning to share my copy with a few of my colleagues at the office. I recommend Blanchard and Peale.

I invite you to read past their words into your agency and classroom and life.

Finding Facts: Research Writing Across the Curriculum

Englewood Cliffs, N.J.: Prentice-Hall, Inc., 1988, 185 pp.

Finding Facts: Interviewing, Observing, Using Reference Sources, published in 1975 and authored by the venerable scholar and prolific writer William L. Rivers, has long been a favorite supplemental text for journalism professors teaching research methodology to reporting students.

The second edition—with a new subtitle, Research Writing Across the Curriculum, and a co-author, Susan L. Harrington—retains all of the strengths of the first volume: comprehensive content within a book of parsimonious length, good choice of illustrations and examples and good writing, with several bits of entertaining humor
