This study aims to provide an overview of the effects of risk management and the implementation of good corporate governance (GCG), and the effectiveness of the internal audit function on the prevention of fraudulent financial reporting and its impact on the quality of financial reporting of state-owned enterprises (SOEs) in Indonesia. Questionnaires are used to determine risk management and other factors that influence each other and their impact on the quality of financial reporting. The questionnaire and survey results of 90 state-owned enterprises (BUMN) and 360 respondents. SEM-PLS was used to analyze the data, and the results show that the implementation of GCG, the effectiveness of the internal audit function and risk management have an effect on financial reporting. This is based on the results of research stating that the effectiveness of the internal audit function is able to prevent financial reporting fraud. The professionalism of the internal auditor, who must carry out audits in a correct and professional manner, demonstrates their credibility. This, and audit training, is often not optimal.

Contribution/Originality: In contrast to the focus of previous research, this study highlights fraud in financial reporting that occurs in SOEs because there are still many who manipulate data to make profits look bigger and to receive bonuses or awards. Furthermore, this is the first time that state-owned enterprises in Indonesia have been used as the sample.

They are market-oriented and self-sustaining businesses, but the state retains a large stake through majority or full ownership (Bruton, Peng, Ahlstrom, Stan, & Xu, 2015). SOEs are business entities whose capital is largely owned by the state either directly or indirectly through distinguished state wealth. The term 'state ownership' is typically used to denote control. By offering products and services in domestic and foreign markets, SOEs significantly contribute to the economy. Simultaneously, the government uses SOEs for a variety of additional purposes, including strategic resource and technology management, large-scale job maintenance and national brand promotion.

Economic and financial crime is closely related to changes and progress in society and has the potential to increase as a result of human creativity to adapt to changes in society (Achim, Vrădean, Borlea, & Florescu, 2021). Recent
