Abstract. Promoting the development of new agricultural management entities is an important measure to realize agricultural industrialization and an important way to realize agricultural and rural modernization. This paper analyzes the existing problems of the new agricultural business entities, aiming at the problems that the effect of its financial support policy is not obvious, the degree of land transfer can not meet the large-scale operation, the financing difficulties of the new agricultural business entities and the imperfect insurance system, and the relevant tax policies are still not perfect. It is proposed to increase the intensity of financial support, improve the form of financial subsidies, strengthen financial subsidies and social security, promote land transfer with double incentives, strengthen the support mode of financial credit, improve the system of agricultural insurance, and optimize the current agricultural tax policy recommendations. It is hoped that it can play a certain role in promoting the development of new agricultural management entities.

1 Introduction

The new agricultural management subject is an important subject to promote the comprehensive promotion of rural revitalization and accelerate the modernization of agriculture and rural areas. The report of the 20th National Congress of the Communist Party of China clearly stated: "Consolidate and improve the basic rural management system, develop a new type of rural collective economy, develop new agricultural management entities and socialized services, and develop moderate-scale agricultural operations." As a large agricultural country, under the guidance of the national strong agricultural policy, new business entities such as agricultural leading enterprises, agricultural professional cooperatives, family farms, and professional large households have developed rapidly. However, at present, some areas in China still have high yield but low efficiency, and the development of agricultural scale and intensification is lagging behind. As an important macro-control tool of the government, fiscal and taxation policies play a vital role in promoting the development of new agricultural business entities. Therefore, it is very important to formulate corresponding fiscal and taxation policies.

2. Definition and classification of the concept of new agricultural business entities

2.1 Definition of the concept of new agricultural business entities

The new agricultural management entity is the product of the reform and development of China's rural management system. Before 2012, new agricultural business entities were used in some articles on theoretical research and policy research on agriculture, rural areas and farmers. In 2012, the concept of new agricultural business entities was first mentioned in official documents. Researchers in the theoretical circle and the government also put forward different definitions of new agricultural business entities according to their respective understandings, but at present, the state has not yet defined them in a unified and standardized way. This paper defines it as: the new agricultural management entity refers to the professional farmers who are educated, skilled and able to operate on the basis of improving the household contract responsibility system, and the agricultural management organization with large-scale operation, high degree of intensification and market competitiveness. It mainly includes large professional households, family farms, farmers' professional cooperatives, agricultural leading enterprises and other operational agricultural socialized service organizations.^[1]
