Manager Of Choice 5 Competencies For Cultivating Top Talent:

Manager of Choice Nancy S. Ahlrichs, 2003-10-31 When top performing employees leave a job they're often quitting their manager rather than their position or their company. In this book, copublished with the Society for Human Resource Management, Nancy Ahlrichs charts unexplored territory as she explains how to become a manager of choice in a business environment in which managing human capital is the new imperative. Today employees care more about family, leisure time, and personal satisfaction than about money, status, or company loyalty, and they have more job choices than ever before. They are consumers of the work experience, says Ahlrichs, and managers must adapt to their individual needs just as they adapt to the preferences of valued customers. Employers of Choice have set the standard for superior work environments. Now, with the help of worksheets, resource lists, and compelling case studies, Ahlrichs shows how to develop the five critical skills for becoming a manager of choice: talent scouting, relationship building, trust building, skill building, and brand building.

Management Theory, Innovation, and Organisation Katarzyna Szczepańska-Woszczyzna, 2020-12-29 Competencies are a component of human capital and one of the most important assets of an enterprise. They play an important role in strengthening the position of the company in a competitive market. Investing in the development of competencies increases the organisation's ability to grow and compete through innovations. This book presents a multi-dimensional analysis of the relationship between managerial competencies and innovations. It analyses the role of a manager in a modern organisation, functions performed by managers, management styles, and key challenges, including shaping behaviour in the process of managing change in an organisation, as well as an analysis of the structure of competencies in particular managerial competencies and the conditions of the process of forming managerial competencies. Management Theory, Innovation and Organisation: A Model of Managerial Competencies illustrates the organisational conditions of innovativeness, which is the relationship between strategy, structure, organisational culture, and leadership, and knowledge management and innovation management. The developed model can undoubtedly be considered the author's pioneering contribution to the studies of managerial competencies and innovativeness. The book will be valuable to researchers, students, and managers in the fields of leadership, organisational studies, innovation management, and human resource management. Indianapolis Erin
