

My Only Credential is a fascinating real life story, though written in fiction form, about a young man's love for money, women and prestige in the city of Toronto, Canada. It is a story of how love opened the vault of the biggest bank in Canada, in addition to other gripping events that happened around the main characters.

My Only Credential puts the reader inside the multi-cultural society Canada is made up of, with its different habits and customs. This multi-cultural society is being spread around the globe, especially in Canada and the United States of America. It shows also that love still rules the hearts of people of all cultures, even in this technologically advanced world.

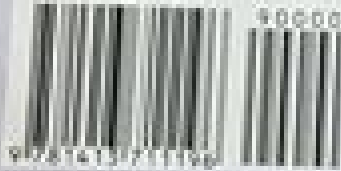

This novel takes the reader on a mental tour of the city of Toronto, Canada, and many of its landmarks. The visitor who reads this novel will be able to walk the streets, visit the sights and live the characters' lives in the same places, hotels and restaurants.

Born and educated in Jordan, William Shareef immigrated to Canada in the late sixties, and published the first weekly Arabic newspaper in Canada in the mid-seventies. He published a self-help book about life insurance and RRSP in the early nineties. He reads and writes in both languages, and as a publisher William Shareef is well-versed on many subjects, especially world issues.

The background of the book cover is a photograph of a city skyline at dusk or dawn. The sky is a mix of light blue and purple. Several skyscrapers are visible, with the most prominent one being the CN Tower, which has its iconic spherical observation deck. Other tall buildings are clustered around it, some with lights on.
