

LO3 Identify How an Organization Links Various Human Resources Systems With the Management of Human Resources to Achieve its Objectives

A Classic Definition of Human Resources:

Human resources management (HRM) is the management of people in organizations. Human resources professionals are responsible for ensuring that the people system attracts, retains, and engages the people needed to meet organizational and administrative requirements for business and government. (Sawyer & McAnnon, 2010, p. 1)

We often imagine that financial management is required through the organization to receive full support. We often imagine that equipment management is required to ensure that the appropriate equipment is in an organization to evaluate and contribute to the organization's strategy. However, I believe, "management" involves the human component which is organization in order to achieve strategic goals.

At this time, we will take most of a managerial focus, recognizing that much of the activities are performed in a collaborative and between human resource specialists and managers.

1.1 Activity: Reflection - What Does HR Mean to You?

Generally, most think about the management and selection and any disciplinary activities/practices that are in organizations. We will be much more than that. Check it out in the diagram on the next page for more information.
