

SEMANTIC ENCODING

Semantic encoding refers to the process of converting sensory input into meaningful representations in memory.

DEFINITION

According to Bedford (2020),

"...semantic encoding is the processing and encoding of sensory input that has a particular meaning, or that can be applied to a context" (p. 122).

EXAMPLE

A semantic encoding example is when you meet a new person and to remember their name, you tell yourself that this is the third person named "Ann" you've met this year – this simple story acts as an anecdote you can use during memory recall.
