

Dreadful disease

In 1347 Death strolled through Europe with his scythe mowing some down and missing others. Swish! Swish! In 1349 he sailed across the Channel to the British Isles. The terrified people never knew who was going to be next. An Indian diary recorded:

There appeared certain swellings in the groin and under the arms, the victims spat blood and in three days they were dead.

These swellings began to ooze with blood and pus. Purple-black blisters appeared on the skin and you smelled absolutely revolting!

Swell - Spew - Swell - Swish! You were gone.

Death's 'scythe' was the bubonic plague and the piles of bodies grew like chopped straw into a haystack. They were loaded on to carts, dropped into pits - or, in Avignon in France, thrown in the river.

Children were Death's particular favourites when it came to the swish. We now know the real reason for this: if you are an adult then you have had quite a few diseases in your lifetime and build up a 'resistance'; children have had fewer diseases and far less resistance. They die easily. Of course, preachers said the children probably got what they deserved! One explained...

It may be that children suffer heaven's revenge because they miss going to church or because they despise their fathers and mothers. God kills children with the plague - as you can see every day - because, according to the old law, children who are rebels (or disobedient to their parents) are punished by death.

You can see that not much has changed.
