

Effect of Regulation

A lot of the material has come from the literature on bundled goods. In this literature we see a good with more than 1 attribute; the attributes are bundled together and sold with one price. The resulting price with, e.g. two attributes is:

$$P = P(X, Z).$$

There is some literature on what the actual implicit valuations in the market of  $X$  and  $Z$  are, or  $\partial P/\partial Z$ ,  $\partial P/\partial X$ .

These implicit valuations are used in housing literature, and are referred to as hedonic prices. It's worth spending some time on this. We want to look at the consumer's optimization, then at how the prices are developed. Standard article is Rosen (JPE, 1974).
