

Star clusters are groups of stars that are gravitationally bound together. They can range in size from a few dozen stars to millions of stars.

Spiral galaxies are the most common type of galaxy. They have a central bulge and a flat, rotating disk with spiral arms.

Nebulae are clouds of gas and dust in space. They are often the birthplaces of new stars.

THE HEAVENS

The stars of our sky are not scattered randomly across the sky. They are grouped into patterns called constellations. These patterns are based on the positions of stars as seen from Earth. The stars in a constellation are not necessarily close to each other in space. They just appear to be in the same direction from Earth.

Star-forming regions are areas where new stars are being born. They are often found in the spiral arms of galaxies.

The Ring Nebula is a planetary nebula. It is a cloud of gas and dust that has been ejected from a star.

The Helix Nebula is a planetary nebula. It is a cloud of gas and dust that has been ejected from a star.

THE MILKY WAY
The Milky Way is a spiral galaxy. It is the galaxy that we live in. It is made up of billions of stars and a lot of gas and dust.

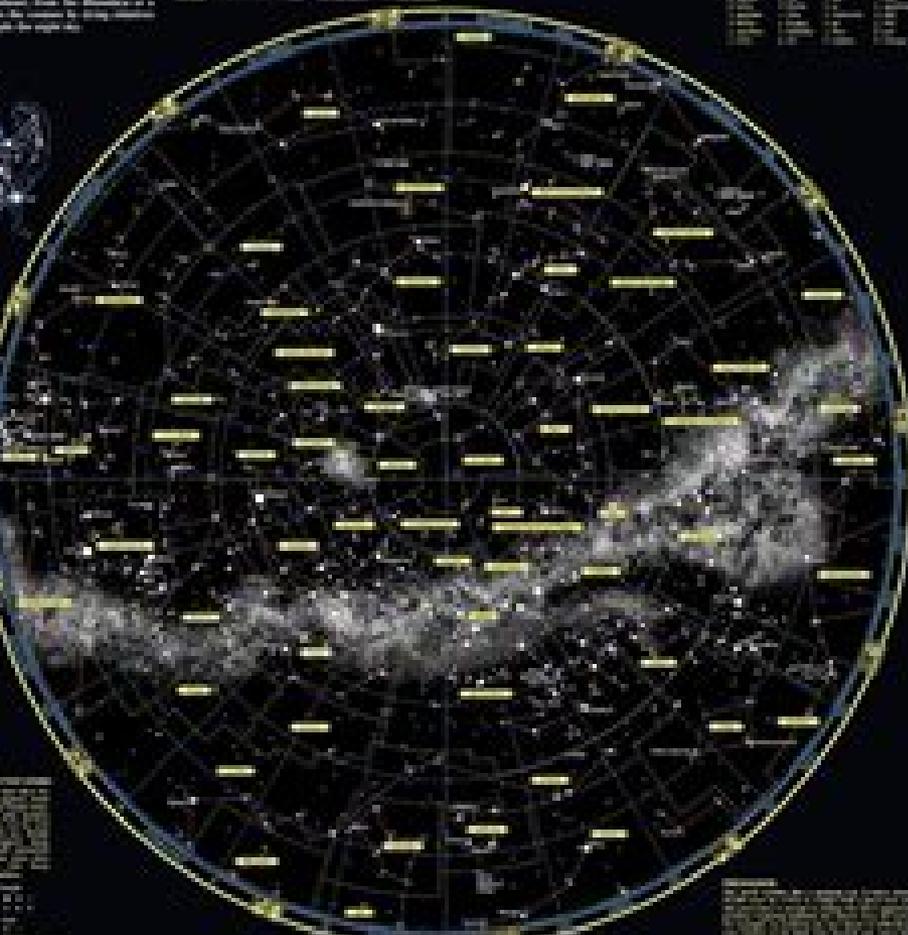

THE GALAXY CLUSTER
The Local Group is a cluster of galaxies. It includes the Milky Way, Andromeda, and several other smaller galaxies.

THE UNIVERSE
The universe is everything that exists. It includes all the galaxies, stars, planets, and other objects in space.

THE NIGHT SKY
The night sky is the view of the sky at night. It is filled with stars and other celestial objects. The stars we see are the ones that are closest to Earth.

STARS
The size and color of a star depend on its mass and age. The most massive stars are the hottest and brightest. The least massive stars are the coolest and dimmest.

THE GALAXY CLUSTER
The Local Group is a cluster of galaxies. It includes the Milky Way, Andromeda, and several other smaller galaxies.
