

TOOLS OF THE SERIALS TRADE

Boston: Robert M. Schooley, Materials for Librarians, 3d ed. New York, N.W. Wilson, 1981, 499p. $19.00. 0-306-550-050-0. ISBN 0-306-55059-2.

One of the key concepts in selecting print and non-print materials for libraries is that selection should be done in a sequence, following the area, subject and then of value tests on systematic selection. Boyd has enlarged the scope of the second edition and taken it out of the narrow confines of the theoretical. Although it is not a book on the larger issues involved in collection development, the material's selection process caused the reader to understand without reference to the whole issue. It is here that the only noticeable revision has taken place — an enlargement of the introductory chapters to include an expanded explanation of the environment in which selection takes place in different types of libraries. There is also a new chapter on the studies — a title, mentioned only in passing in the first edition. Reviews, clearing, interlibrary loan services, and budgets are not considered for their impact on selection decisions.

The material on the selection of serials has not been substantially revised. As in the first edition, only periodicals are mentioned. Serials Review is mentioned as a source of information. Katz's outline in Library Journal is not included in this edition. Non-periodical serials are described as unclassified materials and the reader is referred to Library Journal. Since data is a term used, considered by Boyd to be not applicable to the serial, and neither of the library classification used, we feel that to all the varieties of serials possible and to a better explanation of the nature of non-periodical serials and their place in the library collection might have been included.

There is a library school text that may be used with others such as Katz's Classical Classification to give the student a full picture of the selection process. The substance of other books on collection development areas and related subject matter that students will necessarily refer to regarding collection development should be incorporated for consistency in collection and theory serials libraries.

Current Serials Acquisitions, Ed. by David P. Woodworth. Boston Spa, West Yorkshire, British Library Lending Division, 1982, 312p. ISBN 0-75310-82-8.

This serials reference text is the result of further collaboration between the UK Serials Group and the British Library Lending Division (ed. Serials Review, Series 1982). The work was done under the direction of David P. Woodworth, University Secretary of the UK Serials Group and a member of the Library Science Faculty of Loughborough College of Technology. He also edited the UK Serials Group Current Serials Acquisitions published by the Library Association in 1980 and 1979. This work is an update of volume 1 of the 1973 edition. Volume 2, Directory of Publishers, has not been updated at this time. The majority of the information provided in Serials Review and Current Serials Acquisitions and Serials Quarterly is valid with a few minor exceptions. At least, the work appears nine years after the last edition, an amount which would surely cause the reader with updates over ten or more years.

The scope of this directory is comprehensive. The only difference between the United Kingdom, some children's periodicals, the United States, some student journals and newspapers. As with the Directory of Book Fairs, Journals, and Periodicals Fairs (DOJFC), it includes a page number list of publishers.

The data were collected by contacting publishers and requesting information about their publications. Some titles have been included in the directory with information not directly received from the publisher or with less than full information. Future editions will supply additional information wherever possible. Additional titles will be added as the approximately 5,000 published titles change.

Each entry includes title, year of first issue, publisher name, address, and telephone number; brief subject matter; self-governing information; frequency; circulation figures where listed on a semi-regular; review title and date; distributor address availability; and ISSN if allocated. A special subject code is employed to denote fields of information in the entry. The scope of the subject matter is very useful. While it has been included because of rapid changes, however, a potential publisher should make a little use of the subject matter restricted to it.

The directory is arranged by classified entry within the Universal Decimal System. There are separate title and subject indexes. The title page title is used in the index. The serials edition and three appendices (for use not included here) are statistical and indexing journals, distribution journals and serials with their journals. The latter would continue to be a useful access point.

A Check of Serials Acquisitions Periodicals Directory and Current Serials Acquisitions for journals or books revealed that Ulrich's included all but one title in the American and European serials, of course, as Serials Review and Serials Quarterly. Ulrich's listed six British titles not included in CRJ. All three sources of serials data are practitioners or organizations in the primary area concerned with searching or indexing. From serials publishers, a comparison of titles in the indexes of both works indicated that CRJ coverage of regional societies, social organizations, "miscellaneous" groups, corporate magazines, literary journals, and sports and recreational titles was more complete than Ulrich's. These organizations tend not to provide the value of the publication in its geographic approach. It might be considered a complementary subject of the British serials title which provides more coverage of that geographic area. For data, American libraries whose interest is in the standard or statistical, statistical and general interest serials, Ulrich's should suffice. For libraries whose interest is in the standard or statistical, statistical and general interest serials, Ulrich's should suffice. For libraries whose interest is in the standard or statistical, statistical and general interest serials, Ulrich's should suffice. For libraries whose interest is in the standard or statistical, statistical and general interest serials, Ulrich's should suffice.
