

Safe child birth checklist

"We believe this simple and low-cost tool can make a difference for women and infants in settings around the world."

The Checklist addresses the major causes of maternal death (haemorrhage, infection, obstructed labour and hypertensive disorders), intra-partum related stillbirths (inadequate intra-partum care), and neonatal deaths (birth asphyxia, infection and complications related to prematurity). 4 December 2015 GENEVA – Worldwide, the majority of maternal and new-born deaths occur around the time of birth, typically within the first 24 hours after childbirth. Most of these deaths are preventable.

The World Health Organization's new Safe Childbirth Checklist and Implementation Guide targets the major causes of maternal and new-born complications and deaths, including post partum haemorrhage, infection, obstructed labour, preeclampsia and birth asphyxia.

Of the more than 130 million births occurring each year, an estimated 303 000 result in the mother's death, 2.6 million in stillbirth, and another 2.7 million in a new-born death within the first 28 days of birth. The majority of these deaths occur in low-resource settings, often lacking skilled birth attendants.
