Diana Villanueva Romero
Universidad de Extremadura

Scott Slovic is professor of literature and environment at the University of Nevada, Reno (UNR), where he also chairs the English Department's committee for the graduate program in literature and environment. From 1995 to 2002, he directed the University of Nevada's Center for Environmental Arts and Humanities before eventually helping to merge that center with the University's Center for Environmental Sciences and Engineering to create a new Academy for the Environment. A graduate of Stanford University and Brown University, he has been a Fulbright Scholar in Germany (1986-87), Japan (1993-94) and China (2006)—he has also served as a visiting professor at Rice University, the University of Queensland (Australia), National Taiwan Normal University, Central China Normal University, Tsinghua University (P.R. China), the Ecole Normale Supérieure (France), and Shandong University (P.R. China). Scott was the founding president of the Association for the Study of Literature and Environment (ASLE) from 1992 to 1995, and since 1995 he has edited ASLE's journal, ISLE: Interdisciplinary Studies in Literature and Environment.

The author of more than one hundred and fifty articles about American, German, Japanese, and Australian environmental literature, he has also written, edited or co-edited fifteen books, with six more currently in progress. His previously published books include Seeking Awareness in American Nature Writing (1992), Getting Over the Color Green: Contemporary Environmental Literature of the Southwest (2001), The ISLE Reader: Ecocriticism, 1993-2003 (2003), What's Nature Worth? Narrative Expressions of Environmental Values (2004) and Wild Nevada: Testimonies on Behalf of the Desert (2005), to name a few. In 2008, he published Going Away to Think: Engagement, Retreat, and Ecocritical Responsibility. Much of Scott's research these days examines how writers approach the scientific, political, and psychological subtleties of global climate change.

Scott Slovic lives in Reno, Nevada, in a house he and his wife Susie remodelled to turn it into an energy-efficient home. This interview was conducted in Slovic's office, an adjacent room to where the ISLE journal is produced.²
