Reframing Abstract Expressionism:

Reframing Abstract Expressionism Michael Leja, 1993-01-01 In the wake of World War II the paintings of Jackson Pollock Mark Rothko Barnett Newman Willem de Kooning and other New York School artists participated in a culture wide initiative to reimagine the self At a time when widely held beliefs about human nature and the human condition were coming to seem to many commentators increasingly outdated and inadequate Abstract Expressionism gave compelling visual form to a new subjectivity a new experience and idea of self In this original and wide ranging study Michael Leja argues that the interest of these artists in tapping primitive and unconscious components of self aligns them with many contemporary essayists Hollywood filmmakers journalists and popular philosophers who were turning like the artists to psychology anthropology and philosophy in the effort to reformulate individual identity Taking Pollock s paintings and their reception as a case study Leja shows that critics located in Pollock s abstract forms a web of metaphors including spatial entrapment conflicted production energy flow gendered opposition and unconsciousness that situated the paintings in mainstream cultural discourses on the individual s sense of self and identity In this interpretative frame the cultural and ideological character of the art is illuminated According to Leja Abstract Expressionism effectively enacted and represented the new conflicted layered subjectivity a feature that helps to account for the support and interest it garnered from cultural and political institutions alike

Du Pont, Cuauhtémoc Medina, Gunther Gerzso, 2003 The man Octavio Paz called a glacial spark was a painter for whom intuition always had the last word But Gunther Gerzso's work has in recent years lacked the in-depth attention it deserves a situation meant to be righted by Risking the Abstract Originally conceived in collaboration with the artist and finished with the help of his widow and sons this volume and exhibition provide a better understanding of the artist's essential role in shaping an alternative approach to Modernism in Mexico one that bears an important relationship to Abstract Expressionism in the United States and art informel in Europe

Towards Pragmatic Painting Michael Graham Schreyach, 2005

I conclude that Pollock's drip paintings address the particular relation of individuated subject to object viewer and painting by activating an experience of the general relation of organism to environment In using these latter terms I propose a new way to address the radical proposal about the body in painting that Pollock's drip works make The large scale drip works stripped the body of its specificity and tried to convey some fundamental condition or modality of bodily experience I use the term reflexive potential to describe the primal minimum condition of this complex transaction Reflexive potential is the condition of possibility which an organism and an environment initially emerge as distinct from one another leading to the distinctions of inside and outside or subject and object which characterize all later interactions I contend that Pollock's pragmatic paintings exemplify the original conditions of an organism on the verge of purposive behavior in an environment
