Elderly Sharon Baggett, 1989-09-25 Although residential care and assisted living for older adults has expanded rapidly in recent decades it has done so in a policy environment beset by confusion and conflicting purposes Sharon A Baggett traces many of the current problems to insufficient knowledge of the population these policies are designed to serve In her examination of the frequently neglected interface between policy and people she provides a comprehensive review of current federal and state policies a detailed case study of a state residential care program and an analysis of the needs and characteristics of persons in assisted living facilities Baggett s policy overview covers such areas as the confusion between housing and care supply and demand factors in the economics of residential care conditions contributing to the increase in numbers of assisted living facilities and current policies that define and limit the choice of residential alternatives A case study of Oregon s residential care program shows how that state has adapted federal initiatives to local goals and philosophies of long term care Funding mechanisms regulations and the role of state agencies in developing and monitoring compliance are discussed Following a comprehensive profile of facility residents the question of using functional assessment measures to determine individual needs is explored Linking the larger policy issues with an in depth analysis of residents served and actual services provided this book will be helpful to policy planners and developers administrators and case managers as well as students and academics concerned with housing and assisted living services for the elderly

Community Care for Older People Susan Tester, 1996-03-06 This accessible textbook compares ways in which basic components of community care are funded organised and provided by governmental and non governmental agencies allowing practitioners and policy makers to learn from the experiences of their counterparts in Europe and North America

Long-term Care for the Elderly Robert M. Pierce, 1987 The Long Term Care Crisis Carroll L. Estes, James H.

Swan,1993 This book examines the implementation of the prospective payment system PPS in the US for Medicare hospital reimbursement which started in 1983 The authors discuss the impact of the PPS on health care provision and conclude that rather than improving conditions for the elderly in their transition from hospital to community and decreasing escalating health costs the PPS has restructured the system with the result that the greater financial burden is placed on informal caregivers community and home health care agencies and the elderly themselves For-Profit Enterprise in Health Care Institute of Medicine,Committee on Implications of For-Profit Enterprise in Health Care,1986-01-01 This book is the most authoritative assessment of the advantages and disadvantages of recent trends toward the commercialization of health care says Robert Pear of The New York Times This major study by the Institute of Medicine examines virtually all aspects of for profit health care in the United States including the quality and availability of health care the cost of medical care access to financial capital implications for education and research and the fiduciary role of the physician In addition to the report the book contains 15 papers by experts in the field of for profit health care covering a broad range of topics from trends in the growth of major investor owned hospital companies to the ethical issues in for profit health care The report makes a lasting contribution to the health policy literature Journal of Health Politics Policy and Law Social Security Bulletin ,1986

Long-term Care and the Elderly ,1990 Key Policy Issues in Long-term Care Jenny Brodsky,Jack Habib,Miriam Hirschfeld,2003 Key policy issues in long term care LTC are complex and the numbers of persons needing such care continue to increase This volume addresses these issues the role of and support to the family integration with health and social systems case management and strategies for designing LTC systems Public Policy and the Two States of Kansas H. George Frederickson,1994 The authors survey general revenue and demographic issues and then analyze the five policy areas education corrections transportation welfare and health that consume 84.3% of the state budget and that in terms of both cost and controversy rank highest on the state's policy agenda Emerging from this analysis is the disturbing consensus that Kansas is an increasingly divided state one urban younger and wealthier the other rural older and poorer The Journal of Long Term Care Administration ,1993 Elder Care and the Work Force Andrew E. Scharlach,Beverly F. Lowe,Edward L. Schneider,1991 Long-term Care Rosalie A. Kane,Robert L. Kane,1987 Social Gerontology Nancy R. Hooyman,H. Asuman Kiyak,1993 Aging is a fact of life We see our parents and grandparents go through it We even see ourselves go through it As we get older we enter a distinct stage of life complete with its own biological issues and psychological and social ones too Yet most books on social aging ignore the psychological and biological aspects of aging that make the social issues so important This book provides a complete look at aging so that we can better understand the older stage of life for both ourselves and those around us This book presents a multidisciplinary perspective on social aging It takes the approach of the older person in context and how age related changes in the biological functional and psychological domains can influence the older person's interactions with his/her social and physical environment Unique features include an original approach a multidisciplinary perspective a framework based on research findings and attention to differences by age gender ethnic minority status sexual orientation and socio economic class Social workers psychologists gerontology professionals and professors

Suicide Among the Elderly in Long-Term Care Facilities Nancy Osgood, Barbara Brant, Aaron P. Lipman, 1991 This is the first large scale study of suicide in a population of institutionalized older adults From their findings the authors identify the most at risk groups and highlight the major factors contributing to suicide in older adults in institutions The study described in this work employed a sample survey design More than 1000 administrators of long term care facilities in the United States were randomly selected and surveyed about their staff and facilities and the incidence and type of suicidal behaviors which occurred among residents in 1984 and 1985 Results of the study confirmed that suicidal behavior occurred in approximately 20 percent of the facilities who responded High risk groups of residents included white males and the old old 75 years and older The survey reveals that certain environmental factors such as the size of the facility staff turnover rate per diem cost and auspices public private and religious were related to the occurrence and outcome of suicidal behavior Suggestions for suicide prevention based on these findings are also presented The book is divided into three parts Part One examines various types of long term care facilities including skilled nursing facilities intermediate care facilities and adult homes Part Two highlights design methodology and findings from the national study of suicide in long term care facilities Case profiles of suicidal residents are included to provide a more personal account of suicide behavior and to illustrate important factors in the older individual s decision to end her his life Case profiles of four institutions are also included to highlight environmental factors related to suicidal behavior Part Three focuses on suicide prevention Suggestions on the treatment of depression in the elderly suicide prevention techniques and the ethics of suicide are discussed in detail This book makes valuable reading for professionals involved in the care of the elderly

The Chronically Disabled Elderly in Society Merna J. Alpert, 1994-06-30 In this period of upheaval of our nation s health care system this timely work serves to increase awareness of and knowledge about the problems of societal living among the chronically disabled elderly To meet the goal of optimal social functioning of the chronically disabled past and present attitudes and practices of education health care and social service providers need to be examined and in many cases changed or discarded Focusing on macro and micro contexts and using examples to highlight actual experiences and processes the need for a comprehensive approach to chronic disabling conditions is illustrated This work has important implications for institutions of education in health and social sciences policy makers in health care and social services advocacy groups for the elderly and disabled and individuals and families facing the care of the chronically disabled

Public and Private Responsibilities in Long-term Care Leslie C. Walker, Elizabeth H. Bradley, Terrie Todd Wetle, 1998

The Proceedings American Council on Consumer Interests, 1994

Health Care Issues in Black America Woodrow Jones, Mitchell Rice, 1987-03-23 This unique contribution to the literature represents an important adjunct in developing comprehensive policies that will meet the health care needs of underserved communities in American society The book is readable and contains useful documentation Recommended as an important reference for all academic audiences interested in the politics and delivery of health care Choice Editors Woodrow Jones Jr and Mitchell F Rice present a thorough analysis of the problems of health and health care particular to black Americans The contributors to this work analyze the factor of race as it influences the availability accessibility and quality of health care They focus on barriers to health care encountered by blacks and attempt to differentiate the problems of the black community from those of other disadvantaged groups Using epidemiological data the initial chapters evaluate the general health of the black population In subsequent chapters the contributors examine particular problems of groups within the black community problems which are based both on behavior and environment The work concludes by assessing the adequacy of governmental response to the problems identified
