The Role and Statute of International Humanitarian Volunteers and Organizations Yves Beigbeder, 1991-09-26

Since its birth with the creation of the international Red Cross in 1863, international humanitarian assistance has developed considerably. Since World War II, in accordance with the Red Cross principle of humanity, it aims at preventing and alleviating human suffering wherever it may be found, protecting life and health, and ensuring respect for the human being. International humanitarian assistance involves a complex network of government agencies, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, and individual volunteers. It has been labelled a non-system. While governments and intergovernmental organizations play a dominant and structured role in this field, the non-governmental organizations and their volunteers have proved to be their necessary operational partners, providing material, medical, and moral relief and care wherever it may be needed, beyond borders, at the grassroots level. Following a brief review of recent humanitarian activities of intergovernmental organizations and an analysis of current trends of voluntarism, this book focuses on the role, status, and attitudes of the major humanitarian non-governmental organizations, including the Red Cross organizations, the British charities, Church-related agencies, medical volunteers such as the French Doctors, and UN volunteers. Should humanitarian non-governmental organizations provide relief assistance with the Red Cross concern for discretion, neutrality, and impartiality? Or should they bear witness and denounce publicly human rights violations at the risk of being expelled from recipient countries and having to stop their assistance? The controversial claim of a right to receive and a duty to provide humanitarian assistance beyond borders is also addressed, as well as the possible need for a status to be accorded to international volunteers.
